80,000,000 Good Dollars Now, We Are Paying The Schwab Worm Turns Hanging? No. Chopping? Yes

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

One GOOD piece of news. Next Monday, the railroad workers, as fine, loyal and faithful a body of workers as are any in the world, will have restored their pay level of 1931. This means an increase of eighty million dollars in railroad payrolls.

No dollars could act more effectively or quickly to relieve depression. Each of the $80,000,000 will be spent as soon as it is received, and it will be spent by men that have earned it, for families that need it.

Six years ago the depression started, half a year before anybody knew it. New York's Governor Lehman asks for fifty-five million dollars more for the unemployed.

New York city spends more than two hundred million dollars a year for relief. The national government has just given the President, on top of the other billions, four thousand eight hundred and eighty million dollars to kill the depression, which refuses to die.

Often, after the big war ended, this column has, vainly, advised workers to save money, telling them:

"Some day this country must pay for its foolish share in the big war; you will help pay and it will not be pleasant."

Workers, and the rest of the country, are paying now.

You know perfectly well, because "Doc" Wood, city editor for Charles A. Dana, long, long ago said it, that "when a dog bites a man, that is not news, but if a man bit a dog that would be news."

Charles M. Schwab, arriving from parts across the ocean, turns pessimist, a "bear on business," says the United States appears to have "gone back."

THAT is news. Mr. Schwab usually sees about ten rainbows and ten thousand million quadrillion dollars of profit ahead.

That the great optimist should turn, saying, "we don't seem to be progressing, we seem to have gone back," need not discourage you.

Charles M. Schwab is 73 years old and he will permit somebody, not much younger, to suggest that a man of seventy-three often becomes discouraged just as young men of forty-three or fifty-three are about to put everything right. Age believes bad news, youth believes only good news.

Chancellor Hitler learns with horror that four Nazis, convicted of spying and plotting to separate Memel from Lithuania, are sentenced to be hanged, and eighty-three other Germans sentenced to prison.

At a distance, it seems that hanging four men convicted of betraying the government is no worse than chopping off the heads of two women convicted of spying.

Memel, across the Memel river, separating Prussia and Memel, will perhaps be the cause of the next big or little war. It can hardly be "little."

Memel was given to Lithuania after Germany's defeat. German crowds in Berlin sing, "Memel is German and remains German." Hitler appears on a balcony and waves to the singers. How easily war can start, and how little singing has to do with winning it.

Sir John Simon, the British foreign secretary, one of those ultra smooth British diplomats, is as much shocked by Hitler's plain speaking as Hitler himself by Lithuania's proposal to hang four Nazis.

British statesmanship had such an easy time here, getting what it wanted at the Washington conference, after getting what it needed from the United States Treasury, that to learn from Sir John that his talk with Hitler developed "divergence of views" is most shocking. The "Fuehrer" possesses the gift of disagreeable language.

Mere numbers mean nothing. Richmond, Ind., reports quintuplets, "five swell kids," but the kids happen to be real kids, the mother a "nannygoat." Five kids at birth is unusual, as much so as the recent birth of bison triplets. But it is only when you ascend among the "primates," chimpanzee, gorilla or man, that quintuplets become important.

Every female oyster produces a million young ones and thinks nothing of it; the mother mouse takes one hundred young ones every year in her stride; the shad, if she could hatch and raise all her offspring, would fill the ocean with them. Nature wisely concentrates on limiting the number of human beings, the most cruel, combative and bloody of all mammals.

Somebody wanted and planned to kidnap the beautiful Dionne quintuplets; a plan that seems absolutely unbelievable. Canada says it is true, and, what is more, Canada knows who the plotters and planners were. Nothing can be done. They

MOTHER OF 10 HERE WINS $20,000

Aintree, England, March 29—Reynoldstown, at odds of 22 to 1, won the 97th running of the Grand National Steeplechase here today. Blue Prince was second, Thomond II was third and Lazy Boots was fourth.

Only six of the 27 starting jumpers finished the race.

Golden Miller, last year's winner and favorite, fell. The other finishing horses were Uncle Batt and Bachelor Prince.

Two New Englanders—and only two—won major prizes in sweepstakes on the Grand National race in England today.

A South Boston grandmother and a Bridgeport, Conn., lawyer won a total of $91,700.

Mrs. Mary E. Hines of 10 F street, South Boston, mother of 10 and grandmother of 14, is $20,000 richer.

H. V. Harris, Bridgeport title attorney, will receive $71,700.

Both held tickets on Blue Prince, the horse that finished second.

Mrs. Hines' ticket was in the Canadian Army and Navy Veterans' sweeps.

Harris' ticket was in the Irish Hospitals lottery.

No New Englander held a ticket on Reynoldstown, the winner, or Thomond 2nd, which ran third.

A Lowell woman and a Bridgewater man held Irish sweeps tickets on Lazy Boots, which finished fourth—but there is no fourth prize in the Irish lottery.

In the three lotteries—the Irish, the Canadian and the Michigan VFW—27 New Englanders held tickets on 18 of the 27 starting horses.

General Grumble

Those whose horses failed to place in the Irish sweeps will receive between $5000 and $6000 each

THREE NEW HULTMAN CHARGES

At least three new charges will be preferred against Eugene C. Hultman at the start of the ouster hearing Wednesday, it was learned today.

Specifications of these were being drawn up today by John P. Feeney, counsel for Governor Curley in his effort to remove Hultman from the Metropolitan District Commission on the basis of his record as police commission.

One charge, it was reported, would be that Hultman remained on the Boston Elevated payroll for five weeks following his appointment as commissioner in 1930.

He is alleged to have been paid at the rate of $4000 a year.

Feeney will give the specifications to the governor to forward to Clarence A. Barnes, counsel for Hultman.

Feeney and the governor conferred again this afternoon regarding plans for the hearing before the governor's council at which Hultman will defend his rule of the Boston police force.

SLAYER FISH Again Tries Suicide

Ossining, N. Y., March 29 (INS)—Albert H. Fish, convicted of slaying 10-year-old Grace Budd, today slashed himself twice in the abdomen with a pork chop bone he had sharpened with his teeth. He is in a death cell awaiting electrocution.

Prison officials said the wounds are not serious. This was his second suicide attempt.

WIFE SLASHED; Husband Seized

Mrs. Rose Rago, 44, of Moore street, East Boston, mother of two children, was slashed in the chest and right forearm today following an argument with her husband over money, police say.

Doctors at Boston City Hospital said they feared she will not live.

East Boston police arrested the woman's husband, Michael Rago.

'WAKE UP, AMERICA,' ARMY DAY SLOGAN

"Wake up, America'"

That is the slogan of the Military Order of the World War, and on Sunday, April 7, the local chapter of the order will do its part by waking up Boston.

Army Day is to be celebrated Saturday, April 6. The Military Order of the World War, which instituted the day, will hold its observance the following day.

The program will be held in the Arena at 2 o'clock, with regular army troops, the National Guard, the American Legion, the public schools, Boy and Girl Scouts and other similar groups co-operating.

The program will be climaxed with a prize platoon drill, and it is expected that more than 12,000 persons will pack the Arena.

Complimentary tickets are obtainable at First Corps Cadet Armory, 105 Arlington street.

Six American Legion drill teams, with each platoon consisting of 32 men and a commanding officer, will compete for one prize.

In another class will be the First Corps Cadets, 102nd Field Artillery, 101st Engineers and Marine Reserves.

The student class will include teams from Boston Latin School, Roxbury Memorial and the C. M. T. C. of Lowell.

Three Girl Teams

There will be three teams of girls in still another class. Music will be provided by the First Corps Cadet Band.

The Charles P. Curtis Sea Scout Ship, a Boy Scout organization sponsored by the M. O. W. W., will serve as ushers

The drills will be in charge of Major Stuart G. Hall, assistant adjutant of the 26th Division and

Where Baby Died in Triple Woburn Tragedy

Mute evidence of the fierceness of the flames which caused the death—probably almost instantaneous—of baby Francis M. Mercon, Jr., one of three victims of a fire today which destroyed a two-family dwelling in the Shakers' Glen section of Woburn. Little Francis was asleep in this carriage in the kitchen of the Mercon home on the second floor! Other pictures on Page 2.

John Mercon, whose wife, Catherine, was burned to death in their Shakers' Glen, Woburn, home, was taken unconscious from the blazing dwellling after he had made four vain rescue attempts. TROOPS JOIN Hamilton Hunt

Jackson, Miss., March 29 (AP)—National guardsmen and peace officers strengthened their forces today in the hunt for Raymond Hamilton, southwest bad man No. 1

He is believed to have been one of two robbers who yesterday looted a Prentiss bank of $1100 and carried out a campaign of terror with shootings and kidnapings.

The desperadoes shot and slightly wounded two persons.

WOMAN FAINTS At Wheel, Two Hurt

Fainting at the wheel of her automobile today in Revere, Mrs. Irene Gulledge of Charles street, Everett, crashed into a telephone pole, injuring herself and Aileen Chapman of Grove street, Chelsea, who was riding with her.

Mrs. Gulledge, who recently underwent an operation, lost control of her car at Revere street and Ocean avenue. She and Chapman suffered minor injuries.

WOMAN, GIRL, INFANT VICTIMS IN BLAZE

Flames which destroyed their home in Arcadia road, Woburn, took the lives of a mother, her daughter and grandson today.

Ten other dwellers in the house escaped after making vain attempts to reach those who perished.

The dead are:

MERCON, MRS. CATHERINE, 49.
MERCON, VIRGINIA, 10, the daughter.
MERCON, FRANCIS M., JR., 6 months, the grandson.

The dead woman's husband, John T. Mercon, 54, a Boston Elevated employe in the Sullivan square terminal, escaped with four sons, including the 24-year-old father of the baby victim.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doubleday and their three children escaped from the first floor of the two-story wooden building.

Dies in Carriage

Four times, however, the elder Mercon and Doubleday attempted to dash through the smoke and flame in the house and rescue the three inside, but each time they were beaten back.

Mercon finally collapsed and was carried out of the flaming structure, unconscious, by Patrolman John F. McCarthy.

In the smouldering wreckage, the bodies of Mrs. Mercon and Virginia, clutched in each others arms, were found beneath the sill of a window leading to a sun-porch roof. Beside them was the body of their pet collie, Flash.

In the kitchen, the body of Francis, Jr., was in his charred carriage, where the baby had been sleeping.

Doubleday was awakened by the smell of smoke at 4:40 a. m. and went to the kitchen to investigate. Finding nothing wrong, he returned to bed, but was told by his wife to look at the children.

When he opened another door to cross the first-floor hall, a wave of smoke coming down the stairs greeted him.

Over the stairs also came Francis Mercon, a semi-invalid, and when he saw Doubleday he cried:

"Save my baby! Get the baby!"

Cries Alarm

Doubleday raced upstairs, but at the top, where the door opened to the second floor kitchen, he was driven back by a wall of flame.

He ran down and out to the veranda, calling "Fire!" and arousing Alderman Gerald Seminatore. The alderman telephoned an alarm and hastily dressed.

Because the Shakers Glen section of the town is more than three miles from the fire station, it was 5:05 o'clock before three pieces of apparatus arrived

Then it was necessary to lay more than 1000 feet of hose, taking water from a hydrant and from a small pond

Doctors Check Disease in Griswoldville

By Associated Press

Greenfield, March 29—A mysterious malady which has taken two lives and afflicted a majority of the juvenile population of the tiny mill village of Griswoldville was believed checked by strict quarantine today as doctors strove to diagnose it.

Dr. John W. Cram of the board of health said all the patients had pneumonia with a complication which resembled scarlet fever but without any rash.

Physicians said the infection apparently started in the middle ear and was accompanied by bronchitis.

It was believed to have been spread by contact rather than by food or drink.

At a Greenfield isolation hospital a young child of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hersig, who already have lost a five-year-old son, was in a serious condition, while in the adjoining village of Shattuckville, Greenfield firemen used an inhalator in a desperate effort to save a 10-year-old boy.

Examination of all pupils in the half dozen schools of Colrain continued today, although the disease seemed to be centered here. Doctors have been working for two weeks in efforts to discover its nature.

All except 15 pupils of the Griswoldville school have been ordered to remain at home until further notice.

HOSPITAL NEED Bared by Trustees

Francis S. Moulton, chairman of the trustees of the Boston Floating Hospital, today appealed for public aid for the hospital.

He revealed last year's deficit of $8,851.09, a result of the failure of the emergency campaign of 1934 to reach its goal.

The Floating Hospital provides free hospital care for sick babies and older children.

BURNS FREED IN JOHNSON DEATH

Charges of manslaughter against Robert E. Burns of Hingham in connection with the death of Dr. Harold E. Johnson, Dorchester optometrist, were dismissed today by Judge Daniel Shea in Hingham district court.

Johnson, who died after a fight with Burns in the latter's home on March 15, was a close friend of Burns and was the former husband of Mrs. Burns.

Neither Burns nor his wife took the stand today. The major part of the hearing was taken up with the testimony of Mary Kane, a maid in the Burns home.

STORY OF FIGHT

Miss Kane said she had driven Johnson to his home and that he had been drinking heavily all evening before he returned to the Burns home around midnight.

Testifying Burns was in bed when Johnson returned, she said:

"Mr. Burns came downstairs and went into the living-room with Johnson. They had started to drink beer Johnson had brought.

"I heard their voices getting loud and just as I was going to see what the trouble was I heard Johnson say:

"'I didn't know you felt that way about it.'

"As I entered the room Johnson hit Mr. Burns twice. Mr. Burns then hit Johnson and he fell back on a spinning wheel in the corner.

"Mr. Burns and I picked him up and put him on the divan.

"As we laid him down, he sat up again and we tried to get him to lay still. He dropped back and his head hit a mahongany end table. He died after that."

STAY IN HINGHAM

Miss Kane explained that Johnson was very tall and that the divan was too short for him.

Burns and his wife took the dismissal calmly.

"I'm so happy I hardly know what to say—but I was sure all of the time Mr. Burns was merely the victim of circumstances.

"We plan to stay in Hingham and try to live down the memory of this terrible thing. My two children will continue to stay with us, but we do not intend to send them to public school, where they might be talked about by other children.

"We'll have a tutor and the Misses Kane will remain with us."

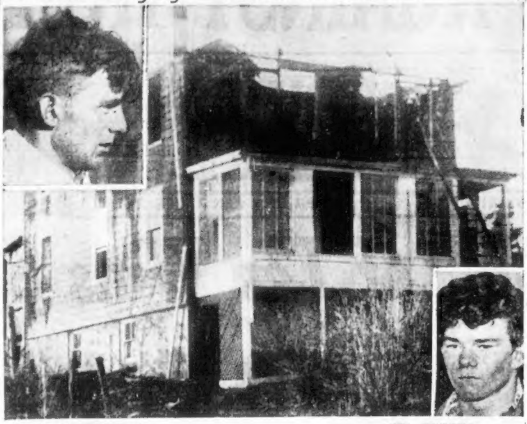
OLD AGE AID

To Inmates Studied

The attorney-general today was asked to advise the state Senate as to the constitutionality of amending the old age assistance act to include aged inmates in certain institutions now ineligible to receive aid.

The request was embodied in an order adopted by the Senate.

Where Raging Flames Took Lives of Three



FRANCIS M. MERCON, SR. PAUL MERCON

These ruins show how fire raged through the upper story of a two family home in the Shakers' Glen section of Woburn, taking the lives of three members of the Mercon family, occupying the second floor. Frank Doubleday, his wife, and three children, living down stairs, escaped. In inserts are Francis M. Mercon, Sr., whose six-months-old son was burned to death, and Paul Mercon, 16, brother of Francis, Sr.

FRANCE MASSES RESERVES ON BORDER

By Associated Press

Nancy, France, March 29 — Reservists of all branches of the French army gathered today at Bitche, a fortified town on the old German frontier, for the annual 21-day maneuvers.

The regular army staff at the frontier sector headquarters said the activities were merely customary annual routine and did not signify reinforcement of the border garrisons.

Approximately 12,000 men are involved in the maneuvers.

Gradual strengthening of troops manning the newly-constructed concrete fortifications along the Franco-German frontier has been in progress several weeks.

Thirty thousand men have been transferred from the Franco-Italian border in this connection.

Stalin Backs Plan to Get U. S. in Far East Pact

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Moscow, March 29—With a plan for United States collaboration with other powers in the Far East reportedly under discussion, Capt. Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, faced Josef Stalin, Soviet chief, in the latter's private office in the Kremlin today.

A high source said that Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff had suggested to Eden the formulation of a Far Eastern pact to include the United States, Great Britain, Russia, Japan, China and France, and that Stalin, too, supported this suggestion.

The British envoy was accompanied by Lord Chilston, British ambassador to Russia. With Stalin were Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the Union Council of People's Comissaries; Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff and Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to London.

They immediately began, with the aid of interpreters, the discussion of the European situation.

can't even be arrested, because they only "planned." Canada's law provides no punishment for planning and wishing to do evil.

In other countries the mere plot would be sufficient to insure punishment, even DEATH.

Scientific tests are popular. Mrs. Hauptmann wants the "lie test" applied to prove that her husband did not kidnap the Lindbergh child. Gerardo Di Benedetto, father of eight children, wants the "blood test" for his wife and his last born child, now two years old. Di Benedetto, who says he is not the father—could not be, because he was away—thinks the "blood test" will prove it. To have a "lie test" or "blood test" could not be accepted as final in court, without special legislation.

English law makes allowances for nature's vagaries. If a girl is born to a man's wife within twelve months after he dies, that child is declared "legitimate," although it is not probable any such birth ever occurred.

BELGIUM OFF GOLD BASIS IN NEW DEAL

By Associated Press

Brussels, March 29—Premier Paul Van Zeeland today proclaimed a New Deal for Belgium, with the value of the gold belga cut "a maximum of 30 per cent" and with sweeping economic and monetary reforms to be rushed into effect.

By the government's action, Belgium provisionally is off the gold standard, although she intends to return when an international monetary conference can arrive at world stabilization.

The premier's announcement cracked the European gold bloc, for the comprehensive program he announced involves suspensoin of gold payments by Belgium.

The premier announced the undertaking of great public works, the favoring of industrial production by all possible measures, reduction of taxes, guarantee of bank deposits, and a desire to resume diplomatic and commercial relations with Russia.

Hull Sees Little Effect on U. S.-Belgian Trade

Washington, March 29—Secretary Hull said today Belgium's proposed currency devaluation was not expected to prove detrimental to the recently concluded Belgium-American reciprocal trade agreement to be proclaimed within a few days.

Hull said American officials would watch the situation and if it results in undue competition for American producers of competitive goods, the United States would take remedial steps.

A new hearing will be held in Pennsylvania on April 17.

BARUCH BARES 'INFLUENCE' STOCK GIFT

By Asociated Press

Washington, March 29—Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, told the Senate munitions committee today that Ben Smith, Wall street operator, had telephoned him in France in 1933 that he had reserved 5000 shares of New York Shipbuilding Corporation stock for him on the prospect of getting government business.

The chairman of the World War Industries Board explained he did not take the stock because he declined to buy into a proposition involving government business.

The mention of Smith recalled testimony indicating Smith, cooperating with the Cord interests, had bought control of the shipbuilding company soon after President Roosevelt took office.

At that time, members of the committee interpreted the transactions as indicating Smith had "inside knowledge" of contemplated big outlays.

It was developed that the first allotment of PWA funds for shipbuilding had been made in June, 1933, while Smith's offer to Baruch was in August, when contracts for shipbuilding were being awarded.

"Smith called me by telephone while I was at Vichy, France," Baruch said, "and told me that he had sent up 5000 shares of stock for me and added that it looked good because the government was giving out a lot of orders and lots of business would be done."

Baruch gave the testimony under questioning by Senator Vandenberg (R) Michigan.

The financier explained that Smith, operating through Baruch's broker, sent 5,000 shares of the stock to his New York office.

"I'll tell you what you can do with that stock," the financier said he told Smith over the telephone, adding, with a smile:

"And I told him."

Committee members laughed.

"You declined to have anything to do with it because it had government connections?" Vandenberg asked.

Baruch agreed.

member of Governor Curley's military staff.

He will be assisted by Captain Oscar C. Bohlin of the First Corps Cadets, also a member of the Governor's military staff.

Distinguished guests invited are Governor Curley, Mayor Mansfield, Major General Fox Conner, commanding general of the First Corps area; Admiral William S. Sims, honorary commander of the M. O. W. W. and Rear Admiral Henry H. Hough, commandant of the Boston Naval District.

A proclamation directing attention to Army Day is now awaiting Governor Curley's signature.

Superintendent of Schools Patrick H. Campbell has asked school heads to have their teachers remind the pupils of the significance of the day.

The proclamation will be read in both the public and parochial schools next week, andthe children and their parents will attend the Arena celebration.

The teams which will compete in the exercises and drills will be divided into three closses.

(1) Patriotic organizations, in which the following teams will compete:

Wollaston Post, A. L.; Watertown Post, A. L.; Garde d'Honneur, Brockton; Guard Martial, North Grosvenordale, Ct.; Sharpshooters Guard No. 1, New Bedford; Garde Independante, Worcester.

(2) Service organizations, including the 211th Coast Artillery Corps, 102d Field Artillery, 101st Engineers and Company A, 2d Battalion Fleet, Marine Reserve Corps.

(3) Student organizations, with a boys' division, featuring Boston Public Latin, Roxbury Memorial High, Hyde Park High and Lowell High, and a girls' division, consisting of Helen Louise Kyte, Everett; New Bedford Cadets, and Garde Independante, Worcester.

In addition, the Boston police drill team will put on a drill.

Judging will be done by Major Ralph E. MacLeod, Major Vincent P. Coyne, Captain Henry E. McGovern, Captain Arthur J. Kelley and Captain Clarence Doak.

Lieutenant Fordham B. Kimball, commander of the Boston chapter, Military Order of the World War, will preside, and the drills will be in charge of Major Stuart G. Hall, vice-commander of the Boston chapter.

CABINET QUITS IN SPAIN

By Associated Press.

Madrid, March 29—Premier Alejandro Lerroux announced today the government had resigned and that he would request an appointment with President Niceto Alcala Zamora after lunch to present the official resignations.

The crisis was precipitated by the resignations of the agrarian and liberal Democratic ministers after the approval of clemency to Ramon Gonzales Pina, Socialist deputy, and 20 others condemned to death after the revolt last fall.

The clemency decree was approved by a majority vote in which the radicals overcame the rightist opposition.

GUARDS? KIDNAPS? WHAT CARE WE, SAY QUINS

FRED DAVIS MARIE DIONNE

Kidnapers, if you want to know, are something less than the least of the worries of quin Marie Dionne. She's the "vamp" of the five famous babies—and here she has her favorite masculine audience, news photographer Fred Davis of Toronto. He has been a cameraman since the World War, in which he was wounded. His portraits of the quintuplets, a series begun on the day after their birth, have helped make Marie, Emelie, Cecile, Yvonne and Annette the darlings of newspaper readers everywhere. Marie is studying picture-taking technique. (Picture copyright, 1935, by NEA Service, Inc., and Boston Evening American.)

TROOPER NOYES TROOPER McCORD

Canada does not propose to have a second "crime of the century," with the Dionne quintuplets figuring in it as kidnap victims. To frustrate an alleged plot, having as its object the spiriting away of the famous babies to the United States, Troopers William Noyes and J. W. McCord of the Ontario Provincial Police are on day and night guard duty at the Dafoe hospital in Callander. When the quins take their daily airing in their five perambulators, one or the other of the stalwart officers acts as armed escort. BARBARA TO FLY TO RENO

By International News Service

New York, March 29—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani, who found only unhappiness at the end of her romantic rainbow, today played hide-and-seek from a curious public.

Within the next 24 hours or so, the heiress to the Woolworth fortune will be flying to Reno to obtain a divorce from Prince Alexis Mdivani.

When the disillusioned princess boards a plane for Reno, she will be accompanied by her cousin, Jimmy Donahue, several bodyguards, an attorney and a maid, according to plans.

Her relatives will follow in the private railroad car of her father, Franklyn L. Hutton.

Love Talk Taboo

Meanwhile, Princess Barbara will remain in seclusion in the Fifth avenue home of her father.

She would not consent to talk about her broken romance.

"I would rather not talk about my private affairs," she told International News Service.

Her lawyer, Millard Tompkins, through his son, issued the following statement:

"Princess Mdivani has requested me to state that she and her husband have separated and that she is here for the purpose of consulting my firm with respect to obtaining a divorce. She prefers not to make any statement at this time."

Princess Barbara plans only to go out shopping before her departure for Reno, it was learned. She wishes to add to her Reno trousseau.

Divorce Is Fun

The princess is anything but downcast. She appears to be enjoying the game of deceiving her newspaper pursuers, several of whom are her personal friends.

She scored successfully on her arrival here aboard the liner Bremen, slipping down the baggage gangplank while reporters and photographers besieged the first-class gangway.

During her voyage she changed staterooms. She used her cousin, Jimmy Donahue, as a decoy, in keeping the press occupied. Even her stepmother and her aunt, Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue, were fooled.

A bevy of private detectives have been hired to guard Princess Barbara during her sojourn in New York.

Donahue had only this to say about Princess Barbara:

"If she marries again he'll be an American."

Dies After Fall

New Bedford, March 29—William Deacon, 80, senior plumbing inspector for the city of New Bedford, was fatally injured in a fall.

Anti-Rabies Aid Given 3 Children

Responding to the appeal of Dr. Simon B. Kelleher of the Cambridge board of health, the parents of three children today visited City Hall and requested anti-rabies treatment for their children.

The children, bitten by a stray dog on the same day on which George P. L. Reader received his fatal bite, all live in the vicinity of the Reader home.

The youngsters are Mary Ford, five, of Pleasant street, Frederick Walsh, three, of Pleasant street, and Charles Willis, nine, of Grant street, all of Cambridge.

Dr. Kelleher said that treatment for them would begin at once.

FUCHS
"DEAD ISSUE"

Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, today characterized as "without merit" a $96,000 suit attacking the financial structure of the ball club.

The suit was filed in Superior court here against Judge Fuchs and Albert H. Powell of New Haven by James V. Giblin of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Giblin, claiming an interest in the club, charges Judge Fuchs and Powell had issued $230,000 additional shares without the knowledge of other trustees, and that he was entitled to $96,600 worth of these.

Judge Fuchs, at the Copley-Plaza, declared:

"There's absolutely nothing to it. It's dead and buried. This fellow has tried to get a settlement out of me before but he hasn't got a nickel coming to him."

Marlene Yearns 'To Be Alone'

New York, March 29—Like Greta Garbo, her big rival in cornering the market on screen glamour, Marlene Dietrich joined the "I Want to Be Alone" Club today.

She cares nothing for elite New York society.

Her lines had a faintly familiar ring. She said:

"In Hollywood, one is so alone. It's a lonely life—and I like it. I'm going back tomorrow."

For three weeks she has been in New York, "doing" the town for the first time. The fact that she has not followed several other motion picture celebrities now visiting Manhattan on a round of gay society functions caused her to chuckle. She declared:

"I don't know anybody here. Also, I don't like large parties."

Miss Dietrich has been getting around, however.

"I've been to plays every night but two since coming east," she said, adding that she was especially impressed with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Leslie Howard in "The Petrified Forest" and Elisabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never."

MRS. HINES PLANNING GOOD SHE'LL DO WITH $20,000

Mother of 10 children and grandmother of 14, Mrs. Mary E. Hines of 10 F street, South Boston, when told that she won $20,000 in the Irish sweepstakes, said: "I am going to do good with it."

Major Paul Hines, advertising man and prominent in affairs of the Crosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion, is one of her brood, but when luck fell into her lap, she thought not of Paul and the other boys, but of two of her daughters, who are Catholic nuns.

"God has been good to me," she said simply, her eyes brimming with tears. "I have two daughters in the convent, one of them in China. I am going to do good with the money.

"There are ways I can help my own folks, and I shan't forget worthy charities."

Mrs. Hines learned only night before last that her ticket on Blue Prince had been drawn, and she refused to become excited about it.

"I never thought that I'd win so much money," she said today at her home.

"I didn't even listen to the radio," she continued. "I didn't have that much confidence in the ticket."

One of her daughters, Agnes, listened to the radio description..

"Blue Prince is coming in, Ma! Blue Prince is coming in!" Agnes cried.

There were a few tears of happiness, and then Mrs. Hines decided that, after all, she had to bake a few apple pies.

Bridgeport, Ct., March 29—One sweepstakes winner who did not care to talk of his good fortune in winning $71,700 was found here today.

He was Harold V. Harris, title attorney, 35, and father of five small children. Harris left his office without a word and went to his home in Stratford.

Mrs. Marion A. Harris, his wife, however, said:

"You can rest assured we are mighty happy.

"If it can be arranged, we will make a quick trip to Ireland to collect."

Mrs. Harris implied plainly she plans to be "watchdog" of the family treasury.

Harris held a ticket on Blue Prince, the horse which placed second.

Maid to Visit Ireland on Sweeps Win

Although the hopes of an Irish colleen here were riding with Alexena in the Irish Hospitals sweepstakes today, the horse didn't win.

But it ran a good race, and the colleen, Miss Betty Finnegan, a maid employed by Dr. Harry W. Hicks, Brookline dentist, who kept an anxious ear to the radio all morning long, was satisfied.

"I followed the Grand National from the time it was broadcast," she said, "and I followed Alexena's grand performance.

"For a little while I thought she was going to win the race. And my hopes ran high. However, I am satisfied that I get several thousand dollars because I drew that horse."

Miss Finnegan has bought sweepstake tickets before, she revealed, but never before has she had the luck to draw a horse. She will probably win between $5000 and $6000.

"Even if I had been a big winner," she said, "I would have had no definite plans for the future. But the chances are that I will visit my folks in Ireland this summer—I haven't seen them since 1931."

She has been in this country for eight years and for the past four years has been employed by Dr. Hicks.

They Smile Today—and So Would You!

Her horse, "Alexena," didn't win the Grand National Steeplechase, but her sweepstakes ticket will bring approximately $5000 to Miss Betty Finnegan.

MRS. MARY HINES AGNES HINES

Ever hear of hugging one's self for joy? Mrs. Mary Hines of South Boston and her daughter, Agnes, don't have to. They're hugging each other as they think of wonderful things to be done with the $20,000 Mrs. Hines won today with her sweepstakes ticket on the horse, "Blue Prince," which finished second in the Grand National Steeplechase. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

South Boston Mother of 10 Wins $20,000 Sweeps Prize

—those in the other two sweeps about $1000 each.

New England winnings were the smallest in years, if not in all the history of the sweepstakes. The result added to the general dissatisfaction in this area where racketeering and government interference with mails is alleged to have prevented many stubs of tickets sold here in the Irish sweeps from reaching Dublin.

Mrs. Hines baked pies in Boston while the race was being run, refusing to listen to radio accounts.

She was not very excited, but wept a few tears of joy when a daughter told her she had won.

"I'm going to do good with the money," she said.

Her good fortune was popular in South Boston, where she is a life-long resident. One of her sons is Major Paul H. Hines, advertising man and American Legion official.

Harris, the $71,700 winner, is title attorney for the Bridgeport Land & Title Company of Main street, Bridgeport. His home is in Stiles avenue, Stratford, Ct.

Those holding tickets on Lazy Boots were Mrs. L. M. Knapp of 182 Powell street, Lowell, and Frank Kitner of the State Farm, Bridgewater.

Had their horse finished third instead of fourth they would have won $47,800 each.

As it is, they will receive a little less than $6000 as "starting prizes."

Starting prizes will also be received by the following in New England:

Four in U. S. to Get $570,000 on Winner

By Associated Press

New York, March 29—When Reynoldstown won the Grand National at Aintree today, the victory meant that four American-owned tickets in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes won a total of $570,000.

The tickets held on Reynoldstown were made out to:

Ray Gold, 64 Jessup place, the Bronx, New York.

Ann Goldberg, 4906 Rorer street, Philadelphia.

Mabel Leitzelman, Olney, Ill.

"5 Glasses," 1321 North Monaker street, Philadelphia.

Each of these tickets pays £30,000—about $142,500.

Three American tickets were held on Thomond II, which came in third, and each of these tickets pays approximately $47,500.

They are:

J. Thomas Roszki, 329 East 24th street, New York.

"Clear Sailing," 37 Gouverneur street, New York.

"Erin Go Bragh," 88 16th street, Buffalo, N. Y.

BANDITS FLEE With 4 Hostages

Chicago, March 29—Federal agents joined the search for three Wisconsin bank robbers who disappeared with four hostages and simultaneously speculation developed that remnants of the Dillinger-Karpis gang might be involved.

Two unidentified couples, seized by the mauraders in a flight from Mauston, Wis., after an unsuccessful attempt to rob a bank, were still unreported and fears were expressed for their safety. The bandids stole their car.

RELIEF BUYER Indicted

Columbus, O., March 29 (AP)—The grand jury indicted John A. Lee, a former hay buyer of the state relief administration, today on charges of forgery, obtaining money under false pretense, and being interested in a public contract.

Dream Brings Woman $6000 Sweeps Prize

Lowell, March 29—Two months ago Mrs. Leray M. Knapp of 182 Powell street, had a dream—a dream that today promises the woman between $5000 and $6000.

Mrs. Knapp dreamed that she was in a neighborhood store and that she witnessed a horse race on her street.

Immediately she associated the idea with the Irish Hospitals sweepstakes and purchased tickets for herself and for her daughter, Marion.

Mrs. Knapp's ticket drew the horse, Lazy Boots which, not a winner, however, assures the woman of more than $5000 as consolation prize.

Lazy Boots finished fourth. Had he finished third Mrs. Knapp would have received $47,800 instead of the sum considerably less.

"But I am happy that I got something," she said.

'Alyce Jane Smiled Through It; So Can I!',

Determined, he says, to live up to the courageous example set him by smiling little Alyce Jane McHenry, Jimmy Neilson, 13-year-old "upside-down stomache" boy of San Jose, Cal., is on his way to undergo an operation in the Truesdale hospital, Fall River, where Alyce Jane is convalescing. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

'Alyce Organs' In Woman, 84

Dorchester Mother of 4 Has Inverted Stomach

An aged woman, who knows wham Alyce Jane McHenry suffered, is praying daily for her recovery.

Lying on a cot in sunshiny Ward G at the Boston City Hospital, Mrs. Margaret McCabe, 84, of 344 Bowdoin street, Dorchester, says her rosary daily that the little Omaha girl with the same affliction will live as long as she has.

No one follows the struggles of little Alyce with more interest than Mrs. McCabe.

She also remembers, in her prayers, 13-year-old Jimmy Neilson, on his way from California to the Truesdale hospital to have his "upside down stomach" righted.

It was not discovered that Mrs. McCabe had the same affliction until after February 26 when she was admitted to the hospital.

She had never been under medical attention until she came under doctor's care at the age of 82 years when she was treated for heart trouble.

X-ray pictures showed her heart on the right side and her stomach in the position where her heart should be.

White haired, with blue eyes crystal clear, a mind as bright as a schoolgirl's, she insisted on "being prettied up to look nice for the boys" before her picture was taken.

She is the mother of three boys deceased and "one little girl" who visits her daily.

Beaming with smiles she told the newspapermen:

"I am feeling fine—except once in a while. I am most happy. Why wouldn't I be. Everyone here is so good to me. They could not treat me any better if they were my own."

Mrs. McCabe then pointed out the pretty brunette Miss Marguerite M. De Wolfe, head nurse, who is "Queen of Ward G."

"Miss De Wolfe is an angel. All she needs is wings to fly to Heaven. She is a darling. She likes me too. She told me I was a good patient. She and all her assistants are very good to me. I hope I am good to them."

At the age of 84, suffering from an "upside-down stomach" of her own, Mrs. Margaret McCabe of Dorchester, prays in City Hospital for Alyce Jane McHenry and Jimmy Neilson. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

LAW ALTERED, PAPER CLAIMS

By Associated Press

Providence, March 29.—The Evening Bulletin says today that the State reorganization bill, the skeleton bill on which sweeping reorganization of 80 departments affecting thousands of employes has been based, was tampered with and altered after it became law on January 1.

The bill was rushed through the legislature on the opening day's "bloodless revolution," along with other bills.

When printed as a certified law today, the Bulletin learned, the bill varied in several instances from the bill which was passed January 1, and which was exactly copied by the Newspaer on January 2.

Insertions and additions, the newspaper declares, have been made in the original bill, among the changes being one which appears to give to Governor Green specifc power, not provided in the original law, to direct activities during the consolidation period. The only oficial copy of the orignial bil in existence was the one which the Bulletin discovers is altered.

RAIL PROBE

Approved in Senate

Alyce Better, Urged to Eat

Fall River, March 29—The persistent high temperature which Alyce Jane McHenry has been running for the past several days was traced to the accumulation of liquid in the left lung cavity.

Doctors were so relieved today that it was not a sign of a digestive disturbance that they encouraged her to eat heartily practically anything she wanted.

Alyce Jane will probably be on hand to greet Jimmy Neilson when he arrives here tomorrow from San Jose, Cal., to have his own inverted stomach righted. He left Cheyenne, Wyo., yesterday.

RIVER DRAGGED FOR MAN, 73

With grappling irons police and firemen today dragged Fore River extension under the Quincy avenue bridge, East Braintree, for the body of Arthur Kearney, 73, of Pleasantview road, East Braintree.

Kearney disappeared last night from the home of his son, with whom he lived.

Officials learned that the aged man had threatened suicide and had long been despondent over ill health.

Early today the son notified police and suggested that the Fore River extension be dragged. He told officials that his father had threatened to jump off the bridge, nearby, and that although he had maintained a keen watch on his activities, he had not seen him slip out of the house during the night.

First Woman Hanged In Montreal, 2 Men Die

By Associated Press

Montreal, March 29—The hangman's noose decapitated Mrs. Thomasina Theolis Sarao, 46, today as she was executed for murdering her husband, according to a witness who attended.

A few minutes before Mrs. Sarao dropped through the trap, Leone Gagliardi, 30, and Angelo Donofrio, 19, were hanged on another scaffold for the same crime.

She was the first woman ever to be hanged in Montreal's history.

The trio were convicted of murdering the middle-aged street-cleaner for the sake of $4500 insurance.

Mrs. Sarao was in the plot, but it was Gagliardi and Donofrio who beat Sarao to death with clubs in a field near Blue Bonnets race track last summer.

Lured by Gagliardi on the pretext of helping the latter at some work, Sarao was attacked by Gagliardi and Donofrio, who was lying in wait.

When he was unconscious from blows, the pair finished off Sarao by battering his head with a large boulder.

Mrs. Viovannina Theolis, 70, mother-in-law of Sarao, was also alleged to have been involved in the plot to kill Sarac. She pleaded to a manslaughter charge and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP

By Norman Archibald

Pals Hold Reunion Between Patrols

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as private first-class in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudun, without any previous training, we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. Then suddenly Beauchamp and I were ordered to report to the First Pursuit Group. Arrived at the front I was assigned to a beautiful new plane, a Spad. I saw a German pilot captured and then heard that one of our own men had been taken prisoner by the Germans.

The last day of July, 1918.

Since we parted on the road, the day of arrival, I had not seen Beauchamp. Each day I half expected him; each evening planned to go over. Only four hundred feet apart, yet every hour was crowded with work and my own squadron affiliations.

Days so filled with excitement made the time pass all too quickly. With every atom of intelligence concentrated on the business at hand, it seemed impossible to get away.

We lived, seriously but joyously, with one thing in mind. To shoot down the enemy—to get our man. All else was forgotten.

But I missed Beauchamp.

I would wait no longer. Would take time to see him—tonight. After dinner I walked towards the billets of the 27th.

Leaning against a fence, in the midst of a group, was a pilot. His companions listened in rapt attention. When, in the high spot of some ancedote, he paused to laugh they, too, laughed, uproariously. Beauchamp—it must be Beauchamp . . . Yes! . . . it was he.

I could see him now. The conversation stopped. Straightening up he looked in my direction and squinting, yelled.

"Archie! . . . Hey, Archie! . . . You big stiff, are you still alive?"

The old, familiar smile lit up his face He chuckled. Introducing me to members of his squadron he said:

"Here he is! Archie . . . you know . . ."

They knew? So—Beauchamp had talked to me—then, he had not forgotten—

"Come on," he said, "I'll show you my billet."

Dingy Hall

Through a gate, along a narrow path and we entered the door of a small house. A dingy hall and to the right was Beauchamp's room.

A lamp, unlighted, stood on a center table, a cot was on either side, a cracked mirror, reflecting a bowl and pitcher of white china patterned with huge, red roses, hung above the wash-stand and a pair of flying boots stood up in one corner.

"Well, Archie," Beauchamp grinned, "shot down any planes yet?"

He flopped on one cot, hands above his head, and I sat on the edge of the other. We lit cigarettes.

"Gosh, it's good to see you, you old bum," he smiled.

"Ditto," and watching him, apparently the same impulsive madcap, I wondered if, way underneath, Beauchamp had changed any.

For surely, with death all around us, he could not be the same reckless, carefree Beauchamp.

Talk it all out, right from the shoulder. Have him tell men, confidentially, that after all war in the skies was no picnic.

That, just between us, it did take the starch out of one's pants.

"Think?" his eyes flooded with laughter, "it's an error to think." he joked, "and besides it requires the use of one's gray matter, which is tiresome, you old rowdy, most tiresome . . ."

Beauchamp then told me about a fellow we had known at Issoudun. Raring to go, he was, and would he shoot hell out of the Germans! Just wait till he got to the front!

"Remember him?"

"Sure!"

"Well," Beauchamp sat up and lit another cigarette, "he's here in the 27th. A bunch of red-nosed Fokkers got on his tail the other day" . . . he poked a finger slowly through a smoke ring . . . "came back here with his ship looking like a moth-eaten blanket" . . . and he chuckled . . . "plumb full of holes. He's a great flyer, but not so anxious . . . doesn't talk so much about what he'll do; they sure have tamed that bird all right."

"Tame You"

His amusement was infectious. As always, he made me laugh. Instead of thinking about another narrow escape I heard myself expounding.

"Bet his plane looked like a cabbage leaf full of rose-bug holes . . ." and, as of old, we howled with laughter.

"Yes, siree, they sure have tamed that bird," he repeated.

It was getting dark. Beachamp lit the lamp and snapping the chimney back in place, sat down beside me.

"They'll tame you, too" . . . but the conviction now that nothing would ever tame Beauchamp was deep inside me even as I spoke the words.

They might "get him"—in time. But, even so, it would never be shooting down a tamed bird. And it would take a mighty good shot even with odds against him to bag a wild hawk like Beauchamp, at that.

"Not me, Archie." He started pacing up and down the room. "No, not me! And I'll tell you a secret, you old dumb-bell, I'll be an Ace when this war's over! I'll go home with ribbons, boy, and" . . . sticking out his lower lip he drew a finger across his chest . . . "and medals on my breast."

Beauchamp was in his glory.

Life at the Front, with its excitement, dangers and activity satisfied his tempestuous nature. Here his restless energy had an outlet. Fighting the enemy, chasing them from the sky, shooting, eluding them . . . or crippled and barely able to crawl home, he found a steady stimulant which the over-spilling health of his youth craved. An excellent pilot, confident, ever eager and "at home" in the air, he was happy.

This was genuine. This was no pose. Beauchamp wore no mask. I was convinced he would go home an Ace, all right. I could just see him, arriving in Princess Anne, tall and straight in a new uniform with a decoration or two.

I'd like to be there and see it all, watch him smile and pooh-pooh at any praise. It seemed so easy for him. And what confidence he inspired! Perhaps I was becoming over-cautious.

But, I'd watch my step and be damned canny just the same. And—not let Beauchamp think I was serious, either.

"Going to get married?" I knew that Beauchamp, of all people, would never want to be a demigod for personal self-satisfaction.

"Ah-ha! Detective Archibald," he jumped up and gesticulated, "cherchez la femme?"

Then I was right. He wanted to go home and get married. In a few years, with a home and wife and kids of his own, he would almost forget there had been a war. Funny, looking ahead like that.

Getting Late

Years upon years and then, some day, we would be two old men. Veterans of the war. Old, old men who had been aviators. Real flyers who had flown in combat at the Front in the World War. Seems incredible.

"Seen the orders for tomorrow?"

"No, have you?"

"Yes, I'm to fly a high patrol but you, Lieutenant Archibald of the 95th, will strafe the trenches at 6 a. m."

Never had I done such a thing nor seen nor heard of such an order. It meant flying low, diving lengthwise over the German trenches and sweeping them with machine gun fire.

"You'll catch Hell tomorrow," he said with a wicked twinkle in his eyes, "better watch your step!"

It was getting late and thinking he was serious I started to leave.

"If I'm going to strafe the trenches at six I'm going to get some sleep and not talk to you all night."

I tried to be casual but this trench stafing was, for me, a serious business.

How he laughed.

"No, no, Archie, I'm joking. Stay awhile . . ."

"Well, what are the orders?"

"You're on a high patrol at nine o'clock and I'm on an intermediate. That's all."

The lamp was burning low. Beauchamp turned up the wick. Stifling a yawn he lit a cigarette and flopped again on his cot. Then—he began to sing:

"Three Musketeers in Iron Boots'—come on, Archie, let's have a duet. Ready?"

"Shoot!"

Oh three musketeers in iron boots

He kicked his feet in the air.

Guarded old Paris town.

His burning cigarette was a baton,

The shrapnel fell; so they did too

Behind his hands he hid his face

And painted the city brown.

He jumped up. "That was some evening, Archie! Good fun, that air raid, eh?"

"You bet," and we giggled. He was a card, Beauchamp was.

A friendship rare, deep-seated and sincere, expressed itself in hilarity and silly nonsense. That is the way with young men.

It was after midnight.

"Good-night, Beauchamp."

"Good-night, Archie."

"Don't worry about being shot down tomorrow. I'll be above you—you'll have wonderful protection. If any Huns get on your tail just waggle your wings; I'll chase them off."

"Oh, Hell! Waggle your own wings. I've got a Spad now—they can't get me."

True, the 27th had received their Spads. The Nieuports were "washed out."

We stood by the door.

"Good-bye, Beauchamp — get some sleep."

"Au revoir . . . never good-bye, Archie. Good luck to you."

Walking away I looked back. His tall figure, bathed in yellow light from the room, stood in the doorway.

"Good-night!" I called.

"Good-night . . . glad you came, Archie . . . Good-night."

Briskly, I walked away, whistling. What an evening it had been! How we had laughed! Beauchamp—he had a Spad!

* * *

The next morning. August 1. Nine o'clock.

Eighteen thousand feet over the lines on a high patrol.

I remembered Beauchamp was flying intermediate and kept looking below for American planes. Not one in sight.

Back for luncheon. Scheduled for another flight early that afternoon, I ate and strolled to the aerodrome. Just before the patrol Captain Peterson called us together.

Something had disturbed him. He was plainly irritated. What could have happened? "Watch yourselves today," he said curtly. "A lot of Boche up there."

Never before had he warned us. Never before had he even admitted of dangers beyond the lines. His attitude, which always inspired us with confidence, was, like ours, ever offensive. Why did he talk of dangers now? We saw no reason.

"Any special trouble, Captain?"

Missing

"Trouble!" he snapped. "Seven planes started from the 27th this morning and . . . two returned."

Five planes shot down from the formation! Incredible! The greatest defeat the First Pursuit Group had ever known.

We adored Captain Peterson. His word was law. Our obedience was love. Daring, experienced and an Ace himself, yet, as our commander, he felt his responsibility.

Like a mother with her trusting children, he could not, without a warning, let us innocently fly into the very jaws of death. He could not be silent. From a human and fearful heart came his gruff words of caution—"Watch yourselves."

The 27th? Did he say 27th? What? Beauchamp! My God! Beauchamp was in that patrol . . . Who was shot down? . . . What names? . . . Who? . . . Oh! Two missing . . . missing . . . Two . . . then Beauchamp was missing—of course. Missing . . . that was nothing. He would return. Beauchamp would. Sure! He always did. He'd come limping back somehow . . . they couldn't get Beauchamp and, believing what I wanted to believe, I climbed into my plane and flew away to the afternoon's job.

Over the lines.

WOOF! WOOF! WOOF! "Oh, shut up and go to Hell."

My throat stuck . . . thirsty . . . wish I had a drink of water. Beauchamp will probably be back by the time we get there. Lagging . . . this is a crazy formation . . . Confound it, turn over . . . what's the matter with this motor anyway? Huns! . . . Look! . . . Go after those specks! Where the Hell's the leader think he's going . . . turning . . . all right, turn and be damned, who cares? Maybe he's home by now. Sure. There . . . that's better . . . now, if he finds any we'll go after them, eh?

The flight was hazy—I know we came back.

"Any more news?" . . . casually lighting a cigarette.

"Your friend, Beauchamp—"

"What . . . back already?"

"No . . ."

"Missing?"

"No . . ."

Strafing the trenches meant anxious moments for the allied fliers.

LEGION CHIEF IN ATTACK ON "ISMS"

Chicago, March 29—"Only one kind of 'ism' can survive in the United States."

That is Americanism, Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., national commander of the American Legion, told several thousand members of the Union League Club here.

Declaring that a great deal has been heard in this country of Fascism, Nazism and Communism, Commander Belgrano put his foot down on all of them, stating that there is room only for Americanism.

In a dramatic plea for an adequate national defense for the United States, Belgrano said that the Legion prefers peace above all things.

"Until the world has learned to do without armaments the Legion will insist that this country cannot sit back with an army less than those maintained by Greece, China and Sweden," he said.

Stating that politics has no place in his administration, Belgrano made a strong plea for payment of the veterans' bonus.

Banker Warburg to Wed And 'Make' Social Register

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, March 29—There is but one member of the rich and more or less prolific Warburg clan listed in the Social Register.

He is Gerald F. Warburg, who wed Natica Nast, daughter of Conde Nast.

When the next edition of society's holy of holies is issued, there will be a new listing, that of "Mr. and Mrs. James P. Warburg."

And the new Mrs. Warburg will be none other than the beauteous Mrs. Baldwin Browne, one of the quintette of pulchritudinous daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark Baldwin of Mt. Kisco.

Announcement of the former Phyllis Baldwin's engagement to Mr. Warburg will be made today, and I dare say the announcement will come as somewhat of a surprise to metropolitan society, for few had suspected any romantic attachment between the two.

Noted Banker's Son

"Jimmie" is a son of the late Paul Moritz Warburg, the noted banker, and Mrs. Nina J. Loeb Warburg, of another famous banking house, whose father was one of the founders of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

"Jimmie's" first wife was the irrepressible Kay Swift Warburg, who writes songs delightfully, composes American ballets and in general has a darn good time out of life.

The Warburgs were divorced in Reno in December last, and they have three children, all daughters.

REV. DR. TUCKER
Talks on "Giving"

The Reverend Dr. Beverly Dandridge Tucker, Jr., rector of St. Paul's Church, Richmond, Va., today delivered the last of a series of noonday sermons in Trinity Church.

"The Getting That Is Loss and the Giving That Is Gain" was his subject.

"We never experience the joy of being Christians, of belonging to the church, until we compute our allegiance, not in terms of our rights, but in terms of our duties, our opportunities to help," he said.

"Our church membership is not a matter of legal contract. It is a voluntary enterprise of love."

BISHOP VISITS
Holy Cross

Worcester, March 29—Bishop Raymond A. Kearney, who graduated in 1923 from Holy Cross College, and has since become titular bishop of Lysinia and auxiliary bishop of Brooklyn, N. Y., back here for a class reunion, asked a two-day holiday for the students to mark the occasion.

CITY COUNCIL ACTION NEARS ON TEACHERS' OATH

An order requiring every Boston public school teacher to take an oath of allegiance will be introduced into the city council Monday by Councillor Peter A. Murray of Ward 19, Jamaica Plain, he announces.

By his order, all teachers now employed would take the oath and new teachers, whether appointed on a permanent or temporary basis, would be required to take the oath before they taught their first class.

He knows no reason he told the Boston Evening American why anyone should refuse to support the government. He declared:

"If there are any unpatriotic citizens teaching school it is time t weed them out.

"We should compel all teachers to take the oath and thus have patriotic citizens teaching our children."

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

It is quite obvious that some serious notice must be taken of the present situation in regard to lotteries, sweepstakes, and the like.

Conditions have changed so radically in the past dozen years that the traditional way the American people have been brought up to regard the question no longer seriously affects public conduct.

Lotteries were once legal and legitimate and popular ways of raising money to erect semi-public buildings and the like.

Robert E. Rogers

Although the United States Government did not promote them, various State governments did so as a matter of course.

But public opinion in these matters slowly changed. It was an economic rather than a moral point of view, in the main, that prevailed.

It was recognized that lotteries took large sums out of the pockets of the people and that the profit of the State was more apparent than real, since the sources of popular revenue were being diminished.

The protest came to a head in the matter of the notorious Louisiana lottery. After an exciting legislative struggle in the halls of Congress, the Louisiana and all other lotteries were declared illegal in 1890 and for over a generation there was little further trouble.

There was, of course, always underground gambling in lucky numbers, such as policy and the like, but these were reasonably restricted by the police power and affected only a small portion of the total population.

Spirit Spreads

The past few years, however, has seen an enormous extension of the gambling spirit among our people.

Today the popular lottery takes the form of race sweepstakes, conducted on foreign soil and therefore beyond control by our government.

The tremendous outgo of American money, increasing steadily of late years, has attracted the attention of two powerful forces: the racketeers of the underworld, who are developing an apparently successful method of stealing the stakes, and the federal officials, who seem almost as efficient in seizing the receipt stubs being sent abroad and confiscating them.

The result is that now, more than ever, the person who plays the sweeps has not even the proverbial gambler's chance.

In humbler fashion the games of beano or bingo conducted by private organizations, often for charity's sake, attract surprisingly large numbers, with a weekly turnover that often runs into hundreds of dollars for a single game.

Must Decide

Our people have got to make up their minds in this serious matter.

They are about to wake up with a headache, just as they did in the matter of the dog tracks. They thought they wanted them in general, but discovered they decidedly did not want them in particular.

When the money begins to flow into the horse tracks, and perhaps even a dog track, this summer, we may see a revulsion of feeling about the whole business of track gambling.

Similarly, if another year of the sweeps shows increasing numbers of tickets either stolen by the racketeers or confiscated by the government, we may hope to see a heavy falling off of interest and money in these foreign gambles which take large sums of money out of the country and give back only a beggarly percentage.

If the government can close down on these foreign enterprises much good will be accomplished and much harm obviated.

Meanwhile the drive must be continued on the less publicized forms of number playing and on poolroom gambling on the races. Human invention and ingenuity in these matters has a way of keeping a few laps ahead of the law.

It may be that the temper of the American people in the depression is such that nothing will effectively control the will to gamble.

The law is only a memorandum, wrote Emerson, meaning that unless the people are behind the law it will remain a dead letter.

A Compromise?

In that case we may yet see a return to the days before 1890, bad as conditions were then. It is hard to stop people who are determined to be fools and wasters.

If gambling must exist, better under the control of our own state or federal government, with a heavy tax return upon the amounts wagered, than to allow the money to go out of the country or become the private graft of the lowest kind of racketeers.

It is, after all, a condition and not a theory that confronts us, and there are occasions on which it is advisable to compromise with the most idealistic of theories in order to organize an effective control over the conditions that everyone knows do exist.

CHANCE WITNESS SPOILS FAKE ACCIDENT CLAIM

This is the fifth article in the series exposing fake accident claims that are responsible in part for the high cost of compulsory auto insurance. Registrar Frank A. Goodwin estimates they total 20,000 a year.

Q—What is your name? A—Mike.

Q—Were you driving the car that struck the claimant? A—Yes.

Q—Where did it happen? A—On Clarendon Hill, Somerville, near the car barn on Broadway.

Q—How dit happen? A—Well, my right Leadlight had gone out and this man stepped off the curbing on the crosswalk and with my light out I didn't see him till I hit him.

Q—You're sure it was the right headlight that was out? A—Yes.

Q—Why was it out? A—Well, it had gone out the night before and I hadn't bothered about a new bulb.

Q—You know that establishes your negligence and makes your insurance company liable? A—How should I know?

Q—You're sure this man stepped off the curbing? A—Yes.

Q—How are you sure if you didn't see him? A—Well, that is I didn't see him but I guess he did. He must have.

Q—What is your name? A—Ike.

Q—You were hit by the car? A—Yes.

Q—How did it happen? A—Well, I'm on my way home, see, and at the corner I step off the curbing onto the crosswalk to cross the street. I see this one light but I think it is a motorcycle. He doesn't see me and he hits me and I wake up in the doctor's office.

Q—How do you know he didn't see you? A—Well, I just guess he didn't do it on purpose.

Q—Do you know Mike? A—I never heard of him before.

Q—How badly were you injured? A—Well, I got concussion and bruises and I am laid up in bed two weeks and the doctor says, "Don't settle for a cent less than $300."

* * *

Q—What is your name? A—Tony.

Q—You were the only witness of this accident? A—As far as I know.

Q—What did you see? A—Well, I saw this man here step off the sidewalk onto the crosswalk and this other man here was driving along in a one-eyed car and ran smack into him. They ought to keep drivers like that off the road.

Q—You took the injured man to a doctor? A—Yes, he was unconscious. I took him in a passing car. Another man came along and helped me carry him.

Q—You saw the man actually struck? A—With my own eyes. The bumper hit him and he was all but under the wheel. A couple of inches more and he would have been killed.

Q—Do you know Mike? A—I don't and don't want to. Anyone careless enough to do a thing like . . .

Q—Do you know Ike? A—I never saw him before that night.

Q—What is your name. A—Tom.

Q—You were a witness of this accident, too? A—Well, I was a witness but there wasn't any accident.

Q—What happened—just what you saw? A—It was late and nobody around. I was standing back in a doorway on the corner waiting for a friend. I work nights and was on my way in town. I saw this car come up to the corner and a man gets out and looks all around.

Q—Can you identify him? A—It was this man Ike—the one who says he was hit.

Q—Then what did he do? A—He unloosens the left headlamp and unscrews the bulb so it goes out.

Q—Then what? A—This other man—this Tony, the witness, gets out of the same car and goes over and stands on the corner. He is not 10 feet from me but he can't see me.

Q—Go on. A—Well, this Ike gets them dirty and smears them over his face and then he lays down in the street under the car bumper like he was going to bed.

Q—What then? A—Well, suddenly this fellow Mike, who was behind the wheel, says "O. K." He blows the horn and starts yelling. The man on the ground starts thrashing around. The man on the corner shouts: "You fool—couldn't you see him?" and rushed over to the driver and they start a fake argument, loud. Some of the late crew at the carbarn heard it and came on the run, and someone came out of a house and someone telephoned the police. Then the phoney witness helped lift the phoney victim into a car and they drove off.

The office of the Massachusetts claims investigating committee was th scene of this little drama from the files of the compulsory auto insurance fake claim racket.

The three conspirators stood a chance of obtaining a fat settlement in their claim against Mike's insurance company until the committee inspectors—scenting an ancient rodent in the claim—dug under the case and found a real witness to what really happened.

In the face of the story told by the real witness, Mike, Ike and Tony confessed the conspiracy.

Mike, the driver, was sentenced to one month in jail.

Tony, was sentenced to four months.

Ike's case was placed on file.

As claim conspiracies go, this was a dumb one, yet the conspirators had every chance of receiving a fat settlement had it not been for the chance witness to their act and the investigation of the claims committee.

Where one such fake is exposed, 500 fakes or exaggerated claims cannot be shown up, although they may be suspected. They are settled—and the rates go up.

(Another fake claim case will be told in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.)

Stories of the Opera

That readers of the Boston Evening American may know the stories of the operas to be presented by the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Boston Opera House during the week of April 1, Ann Ames of this newspaper has prepared and will publish a brief outline of each of the eight operas in the order in which they will be presented. This is the seventh of the series.

"Faust"

The ancient legend of Faust has engaged some of the world's greatest poets, philosophers and musicians.

Lovers of music are familiar with Schumann's "Scenes from Goethe's Faust," with the "Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, and in more recent years with the Busoni opera, "Doktor Faust."

Beethoven considered placing the legend in musical form, Wagner began a "Faust" symphony, and Liszt wrote a three-part symphony—Faust, Gretchen and Mephistopheles—the last containing the famous male chorus.

The familiar story tells of an elderly German scholar named Faust, who has lived a life of meditation and sacrifice.

In his gloomy study, wearying at the emptiness of life and knowledge, he implores the powers of evil to help him.

Mephistopheles appears, and promises Faust his heart's desire. Faust begs to be given once more the delights of youth and love, and having seen a vision of the beautiful Marguerite, at last signs the fatal bond with the Devil.

In the second act, during a merry scene in the market place, Valentine, a young gentleman of the village, deplores the fact that he must leave his young sister, Marguerite, under the care of Dama Martha, while he goes to war.

Faust, now the handsome young cavalier, approaches Marguerite with proffers of love.

At first she rejects his advances, but aided by Mephistopheles (anxious to destroy another human soul), Faust presses his attentions with such fervor that she at last relents.

Despite the guardianship of Valentine's friend, Siebel, Faust, goaded by his sinister accomplice, wins Marguerite's love.

Mephistopheles provides a casket of jewels to dazzle the girl, providing the motive for the famous "Jewel Song," in which Marguerite sings, "Ah! the joy past compare, these jewels bright to wear!"

Valentine, returning from the wars, learns what has occurred. He challenges his sister's seducer, but through the intervention of Mephistopheles, he is slain in the combat.

Marguerite, stricken with grief and horror, hears the curses of her dying brother. In chapel she pours out her remorse, prays for mercy, and is mocked by Mephistopheles.

At last her reason is impaired and in frenzied madness she kills her child, and is thrown into prison.

In the final act, Faust, aided by the Devil, obtains entrance to her cell. They both urge her to escape, but the heartbroken girl, dreaming once more of the happy past, seeking consolation only in prayer, dies in prison imploring Divine forgiveness.

Mephistopheles triumphs at her death, but a chorus of heavenly voices is heard proclaiming forgiveness for Marguerite and for all repentant sinners.

The Evil One cringes at the song of Divine love, and as Marguerite goes to her eternal happiness, he makes his escape with Faust, his only victim.

First Lady Warns Women

"Vote or It's Back to Kitchen," She Says

By Associated Press

New York, March 29—A little more interest in public affairs, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt believes, or it's back to the kitchen for American business women.

"We might well take heed of what is happening to women in other countries, for if we don't we may find ourselves without any jobs at all," she told the Institute of Women's Professional Relations.

"The back-to-the-kitchen movement, which exists in Europe's dictator-ridden countries, should well serve as a warning of what might happen in America if its women voters are not sufficiently aroused to the necessity of maintaining democratic institutions."

Mrs. Roosevelt read a prepared speech of Senator Wagner when the senator was unable to appear because weather conditions prevented an airplane trip from Washington.

Wagner said there was an important reason for enlarging special statutes for the aid of women in industry.

"That reason," he said, "is that they are the entering wedge through which can be driven new and wider forms of social security laws for all groups."

BAKER HOME Sold in Weston

The eight-room Colonial house with three baths, in Weston, once occupied by Edgar E. Baker, former night club proprietor now serving a 12-to-12 year sentence in state prison, has been sold. Announcement was made today by the John T. Burns real estate agency.

The property, assessed for $12,400, was purchased by Carl A. Schuhle. The sale was made for the trustees of the Rosebud Dining CVompany, Inc., of which Baker once was head.

TRIED IN DEATH Of Aged Cyclist

Stewart A. Gates, 51, of Farm street, Dover, went on trial today in Dedham district court on charges growing out of the death of Charles F. Pfeiffer, 72, former Natick selectman, on Dec. 28. Pfeiffer, who was riding a bicycle on Dover road, was gilled by a hit-and run driver.

P. O. Burned

Cabot, Vt., March 29 (AP)—Fire today destrowed the old Union Block, which housed the post office and the offices of the town clerk and town treasurer. Damage was estimated at $25,000. Mail, postage stamps and town records were burned.

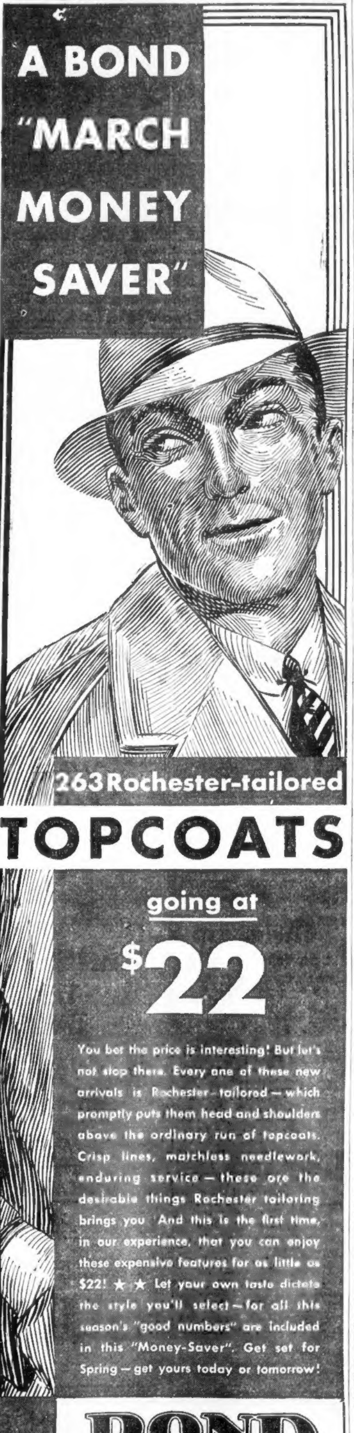
Aged Silver Queen Buries Prince, Looks for Another

Coronado, Cal., March 29—Limping from the beauty shop of her Coronado hotel, the widowed Princess Suzanne Bransford Emery Holmes Delitch Engalitcheff dispatched telegraphic orders that her late prince be given an "a No. 1 funeral."

His Highness, Prince Vladimirovitch Engalitcheff, fourth (but probably not the last, she said) mate of the 80-year-old silver mine millionairess, died in New York of a heart attack.

A foot injury suffered in her last transatlantic crossing during a storm at sea prevented her from going to New York for the prince's rites. The sprightly "Silver Queen" mused:

"The dear old prince, it's too bad. But I don't feel sorry for myself; I'm used to it.



You bet the price is interesting! But let's not stop there. Every one of these new arrivals is Rochester-tailored—which promptly puts them head and shoulders above the ordinary run of topcoats. Crisp lines, matchless needlework, enduring service—these are the desirable things Rochester tailoring brings you And this is the first time, in our experience, that you can enjoy these expensive features for as little as $22! ★ ★ Let your own taste dictate the style you'll select—for all this season's "good numbers" are included in this "Money-Saver". Get a load of this, Jim!
Do you want to save money on your Spring suit?
JIM LISTENING!

"Yes, I know this is the start of the season. And I know it's the usual idea to expect top prices for the new styles. But I've just come from Bond's—and believe me, brother, they're doing something different".

"That's right—Bond Clothes! They're staging a series of March Money-Savers for fellows who buy early, like you and me. And it's one pip of an idea!"

"This week, they're featuring MacKenzie Worsteds Suits. You know—the same goods I bought in that brown double-breasted I've been wearing to the office".

"Well, get a load of this, Jim! Today, I got me another MacKenzie—one of those new blue-greys—and I paid exactly $10 less than the last one".

"How much? No, not $35! That's what I paid before. This one cost me exactly $25, including two trousers".

"I thought you'd be interested. And listen, Jim. While your at it, ask 'em to show you some of their Rochester-tailored suits. They have some dandies, with two trousers, at $30".

"What's that? Yes, I charged mine. That Ten Payment Plan is just what 'the doctor ordered' for my pocketbook".

"O. K., feller! Don't thank me. Just beat it down to Bond's—and get your slice of their March Money-Savers!"

REDS IN FIGHT ON TEACHERS' OATH BILL

Hartford, Ct., March 29—If any argument was needed to down opposition to the teachers' oath bills, it was up in the capitol gallery, sponsors of the bills declared here.

When heads turned to the gallery they saw delegates of the Young Communist League of the National Students' League and of the Industrial Civil Liberties Union.

There were representatives of the Connecticut State Teachers' Association and of "other radical and pacifit" groups too, the speakers asserted.

All of these groups were present to register opposition to the measures requiring school teachers to pledge allegiance to the American flag and the United States constitution.

They did not get a chance to testify because the hearing had to be continued when the time allotted expired with only two proponents of the bills getting a hearing.

First of these speakers was Dorothy J. Bartlett of Putnam, member of the Putnam board of education. She declared:

> "I am heartily in favor of school teachers taking an oath to uphold the Constitution.
>
> "I cannot understand why there is so much opposition to a measure,
>
> "I am afraid that those who are opposing the measure have some reason for so doing that does not appear on the surface."

Representatives of the American Legion, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and of other civic and patriotic organizations were there to present their viewpoints. They are backing the bills.

And in This Cornah!—Joan Hannah Dempsey

Weighing in at 23 pounds is this battling youngster ready to face the world at the mature age of eight months. She's Joan Hannah Dempsey, daughter of Jack Dempsey, the former world's heavyweight champion, and Hannah Williams, one-time stage beauty. The photograph marks Joan's first appearance before the camera, but not the last, if she follows the example of her noted parents. She celebrated the occasion by cutting her first tooth.

LEGAL BETTING
Voted in Maine

Augusta, Me., March 29 (AP)—The Maine Senate today voted, 19 to 8, in favor of a bill permitting pari-mutuel betting on horse racing which was passed yesterday by the House of Representatives.

Following the Senate's acceptance of the minority favorable report of the Legal Affairs Committee by the more than a two to one margin, the bill was passed to be engrossed in concurrence with the Holse.

Vermont Teachers Must Swear U. S. Allegiance

Montpelier, Vt., March 29—Vermont today had joined the roll of states where teachers in public schools must swear allegiance to the Constitution of the United States.

Governor Charles M. Smith signed the Parker bill last night after it was approved at a session in the State Senate by a vote of 17 to 12.

The bill provides that teachers swear allegiance to the state of Vermont as well as to the United States.

The bill was introduced by Senator Richard Parker of Cavendish.

The House general committee referred it to the House without recommendation. After arguments on the floor, it was sent to the Senate with only three representatives voting against it on the third reading.

The Senate committee on education then conducted public hearings.

Leading the forces opposed to the measure was Senator Horatio Luce, who also is a member of the state board of education.

HUGE RELIEF BILL UP FOR FINAL VOTE

By International News Service

Washington, March 29—The largest appropriation bill ever enacted—the $4,800,000,000 work-relief measure—was back before Congress today for final passage.

Since it passed both chambers in different form, Senate and House conferees, after two days of arguing, compromised their differences and submitted conference reports to their respective houses.

They stripped the measure of the Senate's inflation rider and stipulated all administrative and other officers, including state and regional directors having charge of the works program, be subject to presidential appointment and Senate confirmation.

Senator Thomas (D) Oklahoma, whose amendment would have forced the Treasury to issue silver currency against bullion, indicated he would not hold up final enactment of the measure when he said:

> "I have accomplished my purpose in crystalizing the silver issue before the public."

He plans to add his silver amendment to other bills until Congress finally adopts it.

Among the changes adopted by the conferees was:

Elimination of Senate provision requiring presidential appointment and Senate confirmation of all persons employed under the works program receiving $5000 or more.

The conferees struck out the salary limit.

ALBERS ADMITS HE GAVE ADVICE TO BROKERS

Denial that he was general counsel for the Financial Profits Company was made today by Dean Homer Albers of Boston University Law School, at the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission hearing.

Before Edmund J. Brandon, regional administrator for the SEC, charges of stock frauds are being heard against the Financial Profits Company of Boston, the Polymet Company of New York, Winchester Institute of Finance of Winchester and the A. E Gibbs Company of Springfield.

GOT NO PAY

Although denying he was general counsel Dean Albers admitted he had been consulted "on one or more occasions" by officers of the Financial Profits Company

"They may have had the impression that I was the general counsel," he explained.

He had received no pay for the legal work, he said

Asked by John L. Flynn, special counsel for the commission, if he had been interviewed by a federal agent named Callahan with regard to the companies under probe, Dean Albers said he had but he did not know the answers to most of the questions

The federal agent had asked him Albers admitted, about complaints by clients of the Financial Profits Company that they had been "improperly led" to buy stocks.

$105,830 PHONE BILL

Q. When these complaints were given to you, did you investigate? A. Yes.

Q. What did you do? A I consulted my clients.

Dean Albers said he did not feel at liberty to reveal what his clients had told him, inasmuch as this would constitute a violation of confidence.

Preceding Albers on the stand was Mark A Donovan, a certified public accountant retained by the commission

He testified that between January and November of 1933 records of the Financial Profits Company revealed it haad spent $105-830 for telephone service

Walter H. Bradford, an official of the telephone company, declared his company had installed a switchboard with six telephone numbers in January, 1933.

The billing, Bradford said, was on a three-day basis, the Financial Profits Company being required to pay up each three days.

PENSION PLANS WORRY HOUSE

By Associated Press

Washington, March 29—Three developments added today to the worries of House Democratic leaders, who already were pushed to unusual efforts to speed the administration's old-age pension and job-insurance bill They were

Reports that a modified Townsend pension plan was being drafted and would be offered at the psychological time

An assertion by Representative Martin of Massachusetts, Republican leader, that the G. O P House members "will have a conference" shortly on the administration's measure

Representative Isabella Greenway (D Arizona), has obtained more than 60 Democratic signatures on lifting old-age pensions out of the administration bill and passing them in a hurry

The Townsend pension plan originally called for a two per cent tax on all business transactions to finance payments

Reports were that this plan was being modified to require pensions of "not more than $200," with the added stipulation that any money not spent for pensions should be used to retire the public debt

BRUNO BROODS
As Delay Fails

Trenton, N. J., March 29—Bruno Richard Hauptmann sat in his cell in the state prison death house today openly brooding over the failure of his attorneys to win a delay in the hearing of his appeal in the murder of the Lindbergh baby

His bid for a new trial will be heard in June

If the decision goes against Hauptmann he will proably die in the electric chair in August or September

Morro Castle Accuser Found With Gas On

By International News Service

New York, March 29 — George I Alagna the 26-year-old black-eyed assistant radio operator of the liner Morro Castle today was rescued from death by attempted suicide.

Police who revived the unconscious youth in his [illegible] Queens apartment said he had written a farewell note and turned on gas jets

While Alagna was recovering in Bellevue Hospital and refusing to talk to reporters, the blistered hulk of the Morro Castle today began its last voyage on a tow rope to a Baltimore junk yard

Authorities would not disclose the contents of the farewell note

Have you found the SUNNY PACKAGE on your grocer's shelf?

It's a delicious ready-to-eat cereal. Millions of Americans have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe, effective means of correcting common constipation—the kind caused by lack of "bulk" in the menu.

Laboratory measurements show that ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in this tempting cereal is more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables—because it resists digestion better. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this cleans out the intestinal waste.

Isn't this natural food better than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases with each meal. If this fails to give relief, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or cook into appetizing recipes. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ann Frothingham to Wed on April 10

By BETTY ALDEN

PERSISTENT RUMORS HAVE BEEN heard around town that Ann Frothingham would be changing her name to Mrs. William Green Wait in the early spring, but until yesterday the principals in this romance had been able to keep their wedding plans a deep dark mystery . . .

ANN FROTHINGHAM

Yesterday we heard the news that Ann and William are preparing for a small wedding at high noon on Wednesday, April 10 in the Arlington Street Church . . .

Dr. Langdon Frothingham will give his youngest daughter into the keeping of the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Riggs Wait of Winchester and Rockport, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel Atkins Eliot, whose application for resignation as pastor of the Arlington Street Church has just been accepted, will read the marriage service . . .

* * *

Sister as Attendant

ANOTHER talented daughter of the Langdon Frothingham household, Miss Eugenia, will attend her sister as maid of honor, and little Ellen Dunnell, daughter of Ellen Frothingham Dunnell (Mrs. William J., Jr.) will be the flower girl . . .

Philip E. Wait will attend his brother as best man, and Edward Wait, Jr., and William J. Dunnell, Jr., will usher the wedding guests to their pews . . .

A small wedding breakfast for the immediate families will be held at the Frothinghams' home after the ceremony . . . The bride-to-be was graduated from an exclusive finishing school before she studied art abroad . . . She made her debut at the Hotel Somerset during the season of 1930-31 and is a member of the Vincent Club and the Boston Art Club . . .

Her fiance was a member of the class of 1929 at Bowdoin and is a fraternity brother of Delta Kappa Epsilon . . .

Ann Frothingham is the painter of the family . . . Sister Eugenia is a composer, singer and dancer and Mrs. Dunnell plays the violin . . . They have each inherited their talents from their accomplished mother, who has always had the distinguished name of Frothingham, having been born one . . .

The Frothingham residence on Beacon street is a rendezvous of deserving young artists, who receive inspiration and encouragement from this family of patrons of all the arts . . .

Boston Girl Among Bridal Attendants

WHENEVER A SOCIETY WEDDING is staged in Palm Beach the whole social colony is sure to turn out in large numbers to shower their blessings on the bride and groom . . . This resort has the fun of watching its romances flourish during the winter months, but seldom does it have the privilege of hearing the wedding bells . . . the principals in most of the matches made in the sunny South usually meet the preacher up North, where their friends and wedding finery are more handy . . .

But this week Palm Beach had an honest-to-goodness wedding, and when a Boston debutante, Constance Wadley Bader marched up the aisle as honor attendant for Ruth Marian Quigley and Robert Arkel Moffett, nearly every prominent member of the already dwindling winter colony was there to admire this dark, willowy girl from the Bay State . . .

Connie Bader, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. S. Bader of Dover, wore a yellow mousseline de soie frock, made with a bouffant skirt, a Peter Pan collar and a button-down-the-front panel edged with antique lace . . . She carried talisman roses and daisies . . . Connie made her debut at a large al fresco luncheon at the Baders' Dover residence, with Nancy Holdsworth . . . Since early in the New Year she has been basking in the sun of Palm Beach while reading about the festivities of her sister debs who braved the rigors of our Northern winter without a flinch . . .

The bride and bridegroom in this wedding are members of socially prominent families . . . the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Quigley of Palm Beach and Cleveland, and Mr. Moffett is the son of James A. Moffett, a leader in the oil industry in the United States and Commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration . . .

* * *

Helen Howe to Give Recital

ONE OF THE BRIGHTEST LUMINARIES in the field of monologuists is Helen Howe, daughter of Mark A. de Wolfe Howe of Louisburg square, member of a distinguished old New England family . . . Helen started her career as a protege of Winthrop Ames, and after studying in Europe and becoming a professional in this highly specialized art, she established her residence in New York . . .

Therefore, her many friends and family connections here will be only too happy to welcome her at the recital she is to give at the Repertory Theater on April 10 . . . She very seldom gives public recitals in Boston, though many a social gathering has been assembled in some of our most patrician drawing rooms on Beacon Hill to hear this talented young artist's program of original monologues . . .

* * *

Don't forget the opening of the Badminton tournaments today at the University Club . . . with many Canadian guests here to compete for the New England championships . . .

Mrs. F. Gregg Bemis and Priscilla Bartol who will play together in the doubles matches, will entertain visiting players, and Mrs. William Jenney of Dedham and Patricia Bird will have house guests from Toronto during the few days of the tournament . . .

Prominent among the Bostonians who will defend themselves in the play are Mary Whittemore, Junia Mason, Elizabeth Smith, Peggy Spencer, Mrs. John Pierce, Mrs. William H. Locke, Fanny Curtis and Mrs. H. G. Simonds . . .

DEBUTANTE Greets Spring SPORTS

NOW THAT THE WINTER sports season is over and the work and preparation for the Skating Carnival have come to a successful close, Miss Olivia Stone, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sidney Stone of Beacon street, looks forward to the days in the near future when riding, golf and swimming will receive her attention . . .

Mrs. Sherwood Is Hostess

MRS. PHILIP SHERWOOD of Dedham was the hostess at a tea which was given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, on Commonwealth avenue, this afternoon.

The tea was in honor of Mr. Claude Bragdon, who will deliver a lecture entitled "We Ought To Grow Up," at Steinert Hall this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Burr are now in Florida.

Among the guests at the tea were Mr. Howard Walker, an old friend and collaborator of Mr. Bragdon, Mr. Nicholas Bessaraboff, who assisted Mr. Bragdon with his translation of "Tertium Organum," and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bragdon of the Phillips Brooks School.

Pourers at the tea were Mrs. Roger W. Converse, Miss Jean Chisholm of Cleveland and Miss Sybil Dietrich of New York.

Among those who will be guests at the dinner which Mrs. Harcourt Amory is giving before the lecture this evening are Miss Sarah Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Rollins, Prof. and Mrs. Kirtley Mather, Mrs. Constantine Hutchins, daughter of Mrs. Amory, and Mr. Hutchins, Mr. and Mrs. John Bolt and Major and Mrs. Sherwood.

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

SHIPS and How They Sailed the Seven Seas—Hendrik Willem van Loon—Simon and Schuster.

This latest commentary on the history of human society by the distinguished author takes on the appearance of one of the full-rigged ships he describes.

There is a keel of fact, solid planks of history, and a full sail of anecdotes, philosophy and humor.

In his most entertaining manner, Mr. van Loon has related the salient points, not only of the history of ships, but of the men who manned them.

Curiosity, he states, accounted for only five per cent of man's voyages of exploration.

If we may parody the author, curiosity has probably accounted for 95 per cent of his works. He has an unsatiable desire to know the beginnings of things, their whys and wherefores.

Those of us who view the sea with a landlubber's romantic outlook may be startled by his premise—that until our era, "life on board was simply unfit for human beings" with "an old canvas sack or a few precarious years in the local poorhouse" the only reward.

His drawings, and where is there a modern pen that can give so much force and humor in a few strokes, fill the book to overflowing.

Mr. Van Loon's mellowed manner was never better than this latest effort from his prolific pen.

MORE BABIES Bill Pushed

Sacramento, Cal., March 29—A move for more and cheaper babies in California was started in the California legislature.

Assemblyman S. L. Heisinger of Fresno, who introduced a bill said the California birth rate was declining sharply and steps should be taken to reverse the trend.

NORTON CALLS ON MANSFIELD TO RESIGN

Stepping forward as champion of the thousands of Boston teachers who face a seven per cent salary cut, City Councillor Clement A. Norton demanded of Mayor Mansfield today:

"Quit the office and allow the president of the city council to become mayor. He cannot possibly blunder as badly as you have.

Norton's demand followed a bitter arraignment of Mayor Mansfield's administration in which the councilor charged padding of city payrolls "at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars."

The councilor's attack came when formal announcement of the probable teachers' pay cut was made by the mayor and members of the Boston School Committee.

Mayor Mansfield stated that the tax rate bill recommended by the legislative committee on municipal finance was to blame.

May Extend Cut

He declared that the cut might even extend to all city employes' salaries.

The mayor stated that the school board had petitioned for an increase of $1.22 per thousand in the tax appropriation for schools.

The school committee explained that the drop in the city's valuation accounted for 60 cents of this, and the remaining 62 cents was for restoring salaries and automatic increases.

The legislative committee cut 33 cents off this figure, and according to the mayor it makes a savings of $600,000 annually necessary to the school budget.

Of this City Councillor Norton declared:

"After the rebuke given you by the legislative committee, you should immediately resign as mayor.

"The committee saw fit to recommend that the Boston tax rate be $37. Never before in our day has the committee done this.

"The city faces a $10,000,000 deficit, $22,000,000 in unpaid taxes and the highest tax rate of any large city in the world.

"Apparently the committee felt that you did not understand the problems of the city and to save the people, they stepped in."

Then Norton demanded that Mayor Mansfield quit. He said:

"You won your office on a promise to reduce taxes and to save 65 cents of every tax dollar that was wasted.

"Instead of doing this, you appointed more constables, your political friends, at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the city than any mayor ever dared to appoint.

"You have spent more money than any mayor and because of your tactics thousands now stand to lose their homes because of high taxes."

Figures Vary On Malden Population

Maldens' population is either 56,553 or 57,311, or possibly something else.

Mayor John D. Devir received a report from Malden assessors today that the population is 56,553. Last week the ERA enumerators taking the state census reported that it was 57,311.

Mayor Devir says he is certain the population is not decreasing at the rate of 758 a week and that he is not greatly alarmed at the differences in the figures.

The city council may order a new count.

Incidentally there are exactly 3000 more women than men by the assessors' figures: 20,743 women and 17,743 men.

NEW HEART CURE

Drug From Nuts

New York, March 29 (INS).—Dr. K. K. Chen, long famous for his work in combining modern chemical methods with ancient Chinese remedies, today is revealed as having made another notable contribution to medical science.

Dr. Chen announced the discovery of a new drug to combat heart disease. The drug was isolated in crystalline form from yellow oleander nuts, which grow in the Hawaiian Islands, and in India.

CUTTER RACES

To Ice-Bound Ship

Fighting rough seas, the coast guard cutter Mendota today was racing to an ice field east of Cape Race, Newfoundland, to rescue a fishing schooner frozen fast there.

The schooner is believed to be the missing Arthur D. Storey, Gloucester fishing ship, hunted for three weeks.

When the ship was sighted recently in the ice pack by the Norwegian steamer Leif there was no sign of life aboard her.

GREEN FOR NRA, 30-HOUR WEEK

By Associated Press

Washington, March 29.—William Green put the American Federation of Labor firmly behind President Roosevelt's request for an extension of NRA today but he also demanded a [illegible] 30-hour work week law.

The testimony of the federation president before the Senate Finance Committee refuted reports that labor had abandoned the 30-hour week plan in order to get NRA extended.

He diverted from his prepared testimony to say that to make the recovery program fully effective the Black bill must be passed putting the six-hour day and five-day week into the code.

Chairman Harrison asked whether labor would prefer the extension of NRA or the 30-hour week bill.

"There is no choice," Green replied stubbornly. "We ask for both."

DR. BIGELOW'S ALL TO WIFE

The will of Dr. George H. Bigelow of Milton, former head of the Massachusetts General Hospital, was filed today in Norfolk Probate Court, Dedham.

The body of Dr. Bigelow was found in a Framingham reservoir last Saturday, after he had been missing three months.

Dr. Bigelow left all his real and personal property to his wife, Margaret W., with the proviso that she may dispose of it as she sees fit.

"The omission by me of any proviso for my daughter or any child or children is intentional," the will states.

He asks that his wife be appointed executrix and that she be exempt from giving bond. The will was drawn February 17, [illegible].

The very newest furniture creations at guaranteed savings up to 50%

To you New England folks who have been waiting the word to buy, we say in all sincerity, now is the time, and this is the place! The time, because never in our recollection have prices of good furniture been as low, and because, beyond the limit of stock on hand, we have no idea that we will ever be able to repeat such offerings. The place, because for three generations, under the same ownership and management, Osgood's has been famous for conservatism, dependability and straightforwardness we have consistently opposed the policy of rushing from one catch-penny sale to another. On the contrary, we have conducted but two major sales each year, and this storewide sale positively will be the greatest in our history.

Unfolding of Romance

CHAPTER XI

His romance with Connie was the only part of the whole affair he was willing to talk about at all, and it seemed to give him some relief to discuss it. Of course, I was awfully interested. I felt that I was living right through it with him.

I thought about it a lot as it was the nearest I had ever come to a real love story. In the end all the bits fitted together, that is, up to October. After that things became less glamorous. This is the story as I reconstructed it:

As Connie looked out of her bedroom window for the last time, out over the blue waters of Puget Sound, her stiff upper lip weakened, and a few tears escaped in spite of her determination.

This house up in the hills was the only home she had known, the permanent rock to which her flying ship always came home, as it were. Life without it was going to be strange, unanchored. Of course, Seattle would always be there, her friends and family would always be near, but the lovely, smooth life of her girlhood was gone.

"I'm being horribly sentimental," she thought to herself. "I've got to snap out of it. Hundreds of girls have taught school before, and hundreds more would envy me my good job now.

Most people would think Mother and Dad lucky to have salvaged a car and a beautifully furnished apartment from the wreck. Allons, old girl, let's see if your French will stand up under the attack of American youth as well as it used to under that of Parisian dressmakers."

No Illusions

Without looking back, she gathered up her bag and gloves and hastened down the broad stairs to where her father and the trunk expressman were waiting.

"All ready, my dear?"

"Quite."

The baggageman took the last bag. She kissed her father, who hugged her understandingly, and they went out to the waiting taxi.

The new apartment was pleasant and comfortable, out near the university. The Sinclairs felt that they had economized to the last rung of the social ladder, but many a university professor and his wife had looked at the same place with longing envy.

Connie did not remain there long, for in July Aunt Hannah wrote one of her famous letters. It began, "So you've lost your money," and it ended with an invitation to Connie.

Aunt Hannah was a true eccentric. Most eccentrics are either wealthy or poor, as the middle range cannot afford peculiarities. Aunt Hannah, fortunately, was rich. She had taken Connie to Europe on her first trip at sixteen and, so far as Aunt Hannah was concerned, the girl never changed.

Aunt Hannah was spending July at Deep Sea Lodge, a quiet place on the ocean near Del Monte in California. As Connie was coming to teach in California in August, it seemed suitable that she spend a few weeks with Aunt Hannah.

Connie did not have any illusion about securing a good time out of the visit. She knew from experience that Aunt Hannah was a difficult person and that Deep Sea Lodge was no doubt a very quiet place.

She decided to go however, to please her aunt, to enjoy the swimming, and to get away from Seattle for a while.

It was there she met Bruce Lloyd.

Bruce was from Philadelphia, an insurance man by vocation and a painter by avocation. He had the artist's eye for line and color, and enough spiritual depth to see what might be the "inner soul" of things around him. But he could get on canvas only the line and color. While studying in Paris three years before he had realized his limitations.

Instead of remaining there to become just one more artist, he returned home to become a good insurance man. In two years' time he was transferred to the coast, made his home in San Francisco, and painted during his leisure time.

Deep Sea Lodge was not far from the artists' colony at Carmel where Bruce had made friends. He liked to be near them, but not too near when he was painting.

The lodge, therefore, suited his purpose admirably. It was a rambling, two story hotel built in Spanish style. The rooms surrounded a large patio with a pool in the center.

There were tables and chairs covered with gay umbrellas, Chinese servants silently bearing tinkling glasses, and the brilliant sunshine and flowers growing everywhere. Bruce, who had known many beautiful spots in the world, loved this one. To him it spelled romance. So it was particularly fitting that it was against this background that he first saw Connie.

She looked that day like the sixteen that Aunt Hannah still considered her to be. She had been playing tennis and now was resting against a green wicker chaise longue by the pool. Her dress was white linen, rather short, sleeveless, backless.

Her hair was blown into childish disarray, and her feet were still clad in tennis shoes. Curled up on the chair, she might even have been fourteen. Bruce's first thought was, "That would be a good painting."

It must have been than that he fell in love with Connie, for an older artist would have delighted more in Aunt Hannah, with her lavender hair and her lavender suit.

What the secret of the hair was, Connie never found out. Aunt Hannah perpetually wore the lavender shades in summer, the purple in winter, and always her hair, originally white, carried that lavender tinge.

It softened the expression of her restless, active, black eyes, and it emphasized the delicate coloring of her still smooth cheek.

She now regarded her niece disapprovingly.

"I should think," she announced, "that if it is necessary for you to indulge in such strenuous games it would be more appropriate for you to recover your strength, your appearance, and your composure in your own room."

Connie rose immediately, a very small figure, very much dishevelled. "You are quite right, Aunt Hannah. I'll see you in an hour or so."

Questions Asked

As she crossed the patio, Bruce gave up the idea of the first painting, and wished he could capture her figure in action. She walked always as if she were about to break into a run, or rather as if she would at any moment unfold wings and skim the ground. This was a quality peculiar to her, a quality which he found to be both physical and mental.

They met that night. The place was very informal, people who came there came for some time and came often. It was not hard to find someone who knew Aunt Hannah and therefore could introduce Bruce.

"How do you do," nodded Aunt Hannah.

"Good evening. Won't you join us?" invited Connie.

"Thank you; I hoped you would ask me."

"How long have you been here, Mr. Lloyd?"

Aunt Hannah was direct in her questioning.

"About a week this time, Miss Sinclair."

"You have been here before?"

"Yes, several times [illegible] summer."

"Young people are not usually so fond of this quiet place."

Connie interrupted the flow of questions. "You are from the East, I know. Tell us about your home."

"Philadelphia, do you know it?"

"Slightly."

"My parents and sisters live there. It is lovely, green and quiet. I always think of it. But San Francisco enthralls me. It is so very quaint I always smile when I see the motorman get out to swing the cable car around on the turntable. It is as if you were watching a scene from a book."

"And yet it is as if there were no other city in the world that ever had been like it," Connie remarked.

"[illegible] is one of the cosmopolitan spots of the world," [illegible].

"I am surprised you are enthusiastic about cities. I thought you liked quiet," commented Aunt Hannah gruffly.

"At times, Miss Sinclair," laughed Bruce. "Some of us are changeable."

"No doubt," was her dry remark.

By dint of Aunt Hannah's direct questions and Connie's kindly attempts to draw out his interests, they soon knew most of the surface details of his life.

"Must You Go?"

In spite of the older Miss Sinclair's brusque tone she seemed to like him.

"I am going to my rooms. I shall expect to see you, Connie, at 10:30. Goodnight, young man."

This was her way of granting Connie permission to remain below, to dance to the haunting strains of the music, and to enjoy the charm of the blond young man.

They danced without much talking, Connie as light and airy as her soft-flowing blue chiffon, Bruce moving in an aura of contentment.

Ten-thirty came very soon.

"I am not even an old fashioned Cinderella," smiled Connie. "She stayed at least until the clock struck twelve."

"And must you go?"

"I am afraid so."

"But tomorrow—I shall see you tomorrow?"

"Of course, if you like."

"For tennis, then, at eleven?"

"Yes. Until eleven," and with her quick gliding movements she was gone.

The next day Connie and Bruce played tennis, ate lunch, and went swimming together. At dinner that evening Aunt Hannah said, "Sit down, if you like," when he stopped at their table.

Light as a Spring Breeze

By Annice Brink

SUITS, summer and swelter were synonymous once — but there's no reason why the wool suit season should not go all through summer, when you have one of wool as light, fine and porous as this one. Its sheerness guarantees a fit as nice as that of your favorite frock. And not the least important is the dark jacket atop a light skirt in combinations as subtle as dusty brown over putty, or slate gray over silver-gray. Patch pockets, dart-fitting at the waist, and a belted back are attractive. The suit is around twelve dollars; the smart little swagger felt around three. Both are from a Boston shop; for details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Making Every Trump

South fulfilled a two spade doubled contract on the hand below for game and rubber by managing to make all his own trumps despite his right hand opponent who held a natural trump trick against him.

Double (6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) The honor strength is missing but the 4-4-4-1 distribution makes this bid excusable.

(2) Showing his partner he is not [illegible].

(3) The correct bid. With a partner strong enough to double for a takeout the opponents should have trouble playing a one notrump contract.

(4) A gambling bid relying upon the solidity of the spade suit.

(5) West, with a shaded takeout double and a partner who has passed originally, naturally cannot stand one notrump redoubled.

(6) An ill conceived double after the warning given by West's weakness takeout of the one notrump redoubled contract, thus showing either a shaded or entirely psychic earlier takeout double.

West made his natural opening of a [illegible] diamond, dummy went up with the King and East won the [illegible] with the Ace.

That player with a view of dummy should have shifted to hearts immediately but continued with the Ace of diamonds and still another card of this suit which declarer ruffed.

Declarer laid down his Ace, King and Queen of spades, leaving the high trump outstanding, and then played the King of clubs.

West won the trick with the Ace and knew it was essential to get his partner in to lay down his high trump and thus extract one of the declarer's.

To do this he led the Jack of hearts hoping declarer would duck in dummy and his partner would overtake.

However, the heart Jack was properly topped by dummy's King and a diamond led and ruffed with one of South's two remaining small trumps, East throwing a club.

The dummy was re-entered by a club lead to the Queen, and another [illegible]. East was helpless. He could not trump with his high trump as the declarer would then discard and have the thirteenth left.

East discarded and South ruffed again with his last trump. The defense won the last two tricks, holding all of the high hearts and the high trump as well, but due to the declarer's fine play and the defense's shortcomings, East and West's good tricks came together.

South made in all six spade tricks, a heart and a club, fulfilling his doubled contract.

Fish Menus Are Tempting

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

Have you thought of fish as one of the "eat and grow thin" foods?

True, there are some fish, such as salmon, mackerel and butter fish, which have a large portion of fat, but the majority of fish are lean and contribute towards a svelte figure.

If you want variety in fish this week-end we suggest serving striped bass or blue fish, both of which are selling at 30c a pound or roe shad at 50c a pound.

A fresh water fish available is white perch, selling at 40c a pound.

BEEF PRICES UNCHANGED

The prices of beef are relatively unchanged this week-end. The best buys recommended by the market men are lamb and pork. The lamb, of course, is inexpensive because it is towards the end of the season for last year's lamb.

But if a treat is desired spring lamb can be purchased at [illegible] time. The hind quarters (seven pounds) sell for $5.00, the fore quarters (seven pounds) for $2.[illegible]

Once again fruit and vegetable markets are encouraging. Beets are scarce this weekend and cabbage is a few cents higher in price, but other than that the prices remain about the same as they have been offering such foods as okra, dandelion greens, radishes, rhubarb, tomatoes, carrots and celery to bring spring to our tables.

Likewise beautiful fresh asparagus is available from California at 60c a bunch, the bunch containing about 2½ pounds of solid perfect stalks.

Here is a menu for your Sunday dinner:

Tomato Juice
Cushion Style Shoulder
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Cauliflower with Hot French Dressing
Salad of Dandelion Greens
Rhubarb Pie
Cheese

CUSHION STYLE SHOULDER

Have the bones removed from a shoulder of lamb and the roast sewed on two sides, leaving one side open for putting in the dressing. Wipe with a damp cloth, rub with salt, pepper and garlic and pack lightly with the sausage dressing.

Sausage Dressing

½ pound bulk sausage
2 tablespoons grated onion
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 cup bread crumbs
Salt and pepper
Stock or water

Fry the sausage with the onion and parsley, stirring constantly until the meat is cooked enough so it separates into particles. Add the crumbs and seasonings and enough liquid to make a moist dressing. While hot pack into the lamb shoulder. Sew or skewer up the opening. Place on a rack in an open pan and set in a slow oven (300 deg. F.). Cook until done, allowing about 35 minutes to the pound of meat.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Woe Is Luxury For Selfish

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DO YOU happen to recall Thomas Moore's quotation: "I'll taste the luxury of woe?" Apparently "woe" is in highly popular favor with a good many young people who haven't anything to be miserable about. It's meat and drink to them — a snack to be taken at all hours.

In a certain pigeon-hole of my deck I have about 20 letters from young people, all signed "Blue."

There seems to be no particular reason why a youngster who has a good home, indulgent parents, opportunities to make friends and innumerable other blessings should not be happy. So maybe a little jolt might be the right medicine.

It's so much easier to grieve, gloom or grouch than to snap right out of it, so much easier to curl up comfortably in an easy chair and "taste the luxury of woe" than to brace up and throw it off in some good wholesome exercise.

And there is a remedy for depression of spirits that is old enough to have the value of genuine antique.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone," as a very wise poet has reminded you. And you don't have to go so far as weeping to lose your husband and your boy and girl friends. You need only be a mildly depressing influence to find yourself about as welcome anywhere as an attack of influenza.

You can feel the barometer of a room rise when certain people enter it. They may not be handsome, rich or influential, and they may have none of the crashing qualities, but when they come into a room the atmosphere changes and the party begins.

After all isn't tasting the luxury of woe a species of self-indulgence? Suppose we try taking the pledge on that particular tipple.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

When I was a child I had an accident which resulted in permanent lameness. This has kept me from dancing, taking long walks, playing games or indulging in other youthful amusements and sports. Then along came the girl and I think she cared more for me, on account of this handicap—she was that kind.

I can't explain the perversity which possessed me, but, loving her to distraction, I began to do insane things like drinking too much in her presence and telling vulgar stories sometimes. She tried to prevent me from drinking and she would [illegible] distressed when I treated her to a smoking-room brand of humor.

Then one day she wrote me a letter and told me everything was over between us, and as she has left town I have not been able to write or follow her. I seem to have been one of those fools who didn't know when he was well off.

LAME

Surely this girl must have some friend or relative from whom you can get her present address. And if you get it I hope that you will ask her to forgive you and tell her, as you have me, of the perverse streak which prompted your behavior. Even if she does not take you back again, you owe her this explanation.

Your perversity, my dear friend, came from a complex which had to do with a physical disadvantage. Now that you see that your lameness did not prevent a lovely woman from loving you, live down this complex. Her devotion has shown you are as worthy of love as any other man.

In the Spring a Young Maid's Fancy

By Nell Brinkley

1935.
"Do you-see what I see?

"Do You See What I See?" asks Jill of Jean and Jean of Jess. Spring is out in the air, and so is love.

The right quotation is "In the Spring a Young Man's Fancy" turns to thoughts of Love. But a maid's does, too.

"The bud is in the bough and the leaf is in the bud," says the old poet Horace Smith.

Well, in the Spring Love is in Youth's heart, be he man or maid.

And if things go as they should Jean and Jess and Jill will not be walking three, but walking SIX in the greening park.

Soapless Shampoo

By JULIET SHELBY

IT IS EASY TO tell you to take care of your hair, but that advice doesn't go very far if you do not know which of the galaxy of hair products to use.

Women are bewildered by the many advertised shampoos which the druggist offers to her when she goes to buy. Each claims to bring new beauty to hair and their prices are favorably comparable.

[illegible]

This particular shampoo is for dry or normal hair and after experimenting with it myself I can readily recommend it as an excellent shampoo.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Take her word and mine! This shampoo is excellent for a dry or normal scalp.

If you wish to learn the name of this non-lathering shampoo, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

KATIE JOINS SEARCH FOR BOYS

CHAPTER 393

I HAD BEEN able to control my voice and facial muscles before my mother-in-law so that she, aged and infirm, should not guess my panic over the disappearance of Junior and Roderick.

But I could carry my poise no farther. Safe from her scrutiny, with the door of her room closed behind me, I was able to meet Hugh's news only by a despairing, almost wailing echo of his words.

"Gone! Their bicycles gone! Oh! what does it mean?"

Lillian's hand was instantly upon my arm, gripping it firmly, and her voice was peremptory as she addressed Hugh.

"Do you mean that they've been stolen?"

"We don't know yet," Hugh said. "Jim told me that they weren't in the place where the boys usually keep them, and I came up at once to tell you. I left Jim going through every place where the boys might have left them, while Katie—"

Lillian, standing near the window and dividing her attention between Hugh's words and her watch of the farm yard below, suddenly gave a little exclamation.

"Whatever is Katie doing?" she queried. "Look out here!"

Hugh and I came quickly to her side, and I saw with amazement that my little maid, flashlight in hand, and bent nearly double, was going crabwise along the pathway to the gate, carefully scrutinizing the ground.

"That's what I was about to tell you," Hugh said, and there was that in his voice which told me that he was repressing amusement at Katie's antics. "Katie is looking for the tracks of the bicycles, to see which way they went."

"What's wrong with that?" Lillian demanded a bit truculently. "It's what somebody ought to do and even if she is a little bit spectacular in the doing of it, I'll back her to find any tracks if they're there."

"So will I," I commented tremulously, for there long has been distinct respect mingled with my amusement at Katie's ambitions to be a "detecatuff," and her assiduous study of the "correspondence course in detecting," for which she has paid out a goodly sum of her wages.

With a sudden impetuous movement I turned from the window.

"What are we standing here for?" I asked. "I'm going down to find my boy."

"Of course you shall," Lillian said soothingly, "but you'll do better work if you take three minutes to change into something suited to the outdoors."

I had completely forgotten my bathrobe and slippers, the costume in which I had dashed down the hall to summon Hugh and my father when I first had discovered the absence of Junior and Roderick from their beds. Further, I found myself [illegible] not [illegible] the costume but at the recollection of the look in Aunt Arlene's eyes when she had opened her door to the hall where Hugh had caught and steadied me as I swerved and almost fell in my terror at the inexplicable disappearance of my small son and his cousin.

I did not dare to look openly at Hugh as, with a stammered "All right" to Lillian, I fled past them to the door of my room. But a quick, furtive glance from under my lowered eyelashes showed his face absolutely calm, as he stood with Lillian watching Katie through the window.

Relieved, I hurried [illegible] my own room and dashed [illegible] like, into a suit [illegible] shoes suitable for [illegible] the country [illegible]. When I came back to the corridor I was almost within the three minutes Lillian [illegible] gave me [illegible]

"[illegible] work," she said. "Now you run along with Hugh and forget everything [illegible] Marion to help me [illegible] of the boys and keep the home fires burning against your return [illegible] Good hunting."

Mrs. Beeckman Correct Manners

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

A friend of my sister's gave a surprise birthday party for her. Being her sister, I took care of all the duties to be attended to.

The party consisted of a group of young people, and knowing that they all expected to see the gifts, and my sister not knowing that gifts had been brought, I suggested to the host that he tell my sister to open the presents and show them around.

He said that he did not think that everyone had brought gifts, and that the others might be embarrassed if this were done.

He did not in any way think it was necessary to show them anyhow, even though everyone had brought one.

As I am not very well acquainted with social affairs, thinking he knew more about such matters, I let it go at that.

As one of the girls was leaving, she suggested that the gifts be shown. Since then I think a very grave social error has been made. Both my sister and I feel terrible about this. Please give me your opinion on this.

S

You and your sister mustn't worry about this happening at the party.

Since the man who made the decision about showing the presents was the host of the party, there was nothing that you could do but abide by his decision. And I am sure that the guests will understand this.

High Puff COIFFURES ARE New

Question: What is the latest and most stylish way of fixing your hair this spring? I had my hair cut in long bangs early last fall, but I am now tired of them, and would like to have an entirely new coiffure. Please tell me what you consider the best way of doing your hair for spring. Elizabeth A., Boston.

Answer: The surprising thing about hairdressing styles this spring is that there is really no one mode. There are dozens of them, all [illegible] and smart. There are quaint arrangements for the naive girl—demure partings, [illegible] curls and a suggestion of the early days of girlhood. There are plain effects with snug tight strands and sculptured curls in astonishing new designs for the sophisticated girl. For the girl who is always three laps ahead of the beauty parade there are dashing high pyramids of puffs. If you have pretty ears and nice temples, sleek your locks back at the sides.

Question: I have hair on my arms and face and would like to bleach it. I would appreciate it if you would publish this information in your column about bleaching superfluous hair. Please state how it is done and how often to do it.

T. D., Dorchester.

Answer: My superfluous hair leaflet contains a bleaching recipe. This leaflet gives directions on how to bleach unwanted hair. To obtain this leaflet, write to me again, and be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Question: A short time ago I read about an eyelash grower. I would like to know the name of it and where it can be bought. I would also appreciate it if you could tell me what to do for enlarged pores.

MISS H. D., Waltham.

Answer: Trade names are never mentioned in this column, and since you failed to enclose return postage in your letter I cannot send along the information which you requested. There is an excellent new non-toxic eye lash grower on the market, the name of which I will gladly supply you if you write to me again, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. JOHNSON MAPS FINAL BLAST AT FR. COUGHLIN

By Associated Press

Okmulgee, Okla., March 29—General Hugh Johnson [illegible] ambitions [illegible] were laid temporarily today as he prepared a final [illegible] at Father Coughlin [illegible] given Saturday night over the radio.

"This is going to dispose of the controversy," Johnson said of his reply to the Detroit priest, with whom he has been carrying on an extended debate over the air.

The former [illegible] chief didn't care to talk about what he was going to do. In fact, he didn't care to talk about many things, particularly whether he is going to run for the Senate against Senator T. P. Gore next fall.

Johnson's announcement that he was going back to Oklahoma to live gave credence to the report that he will seek the senatorship.

Today his answer was "No," with the reservation that "I have the right to change my mind any time I damn please."

From Washington the sharp-tongued Senator Gore sent a "welcome home" to Johnson.

"Oklahoma's gates stand ajar. We welcome all immigrant and all red-blooded Americans, especially those returning after a long absence.

"We always welcome the wanderer's return and we'll kill the fatted calf; and if we can't we'll kill the little dogie and celebrate the last roundup."

Johnson, should he run, probably would do so with the backing of the national administration, which has been heckled by the outspoken Gore.

Johnson also would be welcomed on the Senate floor as a counter irritant to Senator Long of Louisiana.

Johnson has been spending most of the time here in the cottage home of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Johnson.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Ballad of Error,
Or Sad Saga
Of Baxter Jordan

KNOWING BUCK JORDAN of the Braves for a plain, patient and gentle-spoken man, who is given to gnawing his shirt-cuffs in private and sitting through long silences in public, I am surprised that he could muster enough sass and mad-words to irritate Judge Emil Fuchs, who recently telegraphed him a licking and shooed him home to his mountains

Austen Lake

Only lately I sat at the same dining table with Buck and Mrs. Jordan at the West Coast Inn, St. Petersburg, where we chewed rubberized chicken, wilted lettuce and pasteboard rolls and listened to each other's musical munching.

And in the evenings, when Buck was not strolling with his lady, who is a sweetly, sad-faced girl, he would sit on the hotel tree-lawn watching the sun set and after that the stars.

* * *

Installment on Old Debt

I CONFESS THAT I AM prejudiced in Jordan's favor. I still owe him a refund for an old, mistaken wrong when, two years ago, I slurred him unbecomingly and printed that he was a surly, tangle-foot type with a foggy, faraway mind and could not hit a doghouse with a bull fiddle.

He made no outcry about this in our later meetings, merely giving his head a quick, ducking nod and passing on with a moist light in his eye like a man brooding on ancient thoughts.

Then one day, a year ago, I was sitting with Bill McKechnie, who under his stern, Scotch crust is a tolerant, understanding man. Nearby, Bill's small daughter, Carol Ann, was climbing Jordan's shin and piping childish nothings. And, for the first time, I saw Jordan twist his face into an unaccustomed smile, like a cobbler folding new leather.

* * *

Lesson in Tolerance

FOR A BRIEF SPELL McKECHNIE studied little Carol and big Buck. Then he mused:

"I don't see how he can stand the sight of a child after what he has been through."

And I learned then why Jordan had seemed the tangle-foot, sullen type with a foggy, faraway mind

The previous year, within a few months, he had lost his two youngsters, tiny tots of Carol's age. And his wife had lain for long months while the man-with-the-scythe hovered close beside her hospital bed

"It was a marvel of will power that Buck played ball at all," said Bill, adding, "He needed the money."

So, you see, I still owe Buck a refund for an old, mistaken wrong, and I resolved then that, for me at least, he could mix his feet on the field and bat goose eggs with my best blessings.

And now, if he wants a little more salary out of the Braves, who are counting their pennies very carefully, I trust that he will get that, too, lest Judge Emil Fuchs have to pour his portly person into a Braves' uniform and go to playing Buck's vacated bag himself.

Mysteries of Malone's Meander

BOB QUINN IS GIVING OFF hollow hoots over the mysterious manner in which Pat Malone, the St. Louis Cardinals pitcher, slid over the National League fence and into custody of the Yankees.

Bob, who never hollers without being hurt, declares that he was not asked to waive on the tub-stomached, eccentric pitcher, and hints, if he had been asked, he would have claimed him.

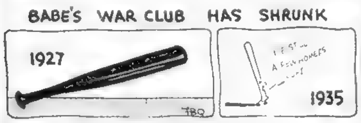
Casey Stengel, whose hair is much grayer for the worry such people have given him since becoming Brooklyn manager, is saying less than nothing, secretly hoping that Quinn will not hand the case over to Judge Landis for review lest Pat's free and restless spirit be added to Brooklyn's goofy gentlemen of the ensemble.

* * *

History in Heft of Babe's Bats

YEARS AGO, AT THE HEIGHT of his swinging power when he flogged 60 home runs over the outfield screens, Babe Ruth swung a 56-ounce black bat of persimmon wood, the heaviest in the major leagues.

Yet this year, with the Braves, Babe flourishes an ash bat weighing a scant 36 ounces, a stick of the same heft that Midget Maranville uses. Over the years since his batting peak, he told me, he has gradually whittled down the burden of his clubs a few ounces at a time, to keep pace with his aging arms.



"I pick my clubs for their feel," he said. "And each year since 1927 a lighter club has felt better."

The records show, as Babe's clubs grow lighter, his distance slugging dwindled in proportion. Thus in home-run history since 1927 has been: '28—54, '29—46, '30—49, '31—46, '32—41, '33—34 and '34—22.

Young Connie Joins Old Connie

CONNIE MACK, JR., IS A LITHE, lean lad with youthful peach-fuzz on his cheeks, just 50 years younger than his 72-year-old sire, gray, grizzled and grand fatherly manager of the Athletics, under whom Junior is making his debut as an indentured apprentice, custodian of the ball bag and master of the fungo sticks . . . A hint of Babe Ruth's growing caution in financial matters is shown by the fact that he just bet Ben Chapman of the Yankees that he (Babe) would outhit him (Ben). A similar wager last year cost Babe $25. Ben cashed the first check and asked for a duplicate to frame as a souvenir. Cautious Babe furnished it, with a bold, schoolboy scrawl across the back, "Sample—not to be cashed."

DANNO FAVORITE IN GO WITH ZAHARIAS

FULL HOUSE TO SEE BOUT

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney will meet the most severe mat test he has experienced since he invaded the United States in quest of the heavyweight wrestling championship when he battles the rugged George Zaharias in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Garden tonight.

Zaharias recently scored a fall against Ed Don George. Later in the match he was disqualified by Referee Charley Donnell for the alleged use of the strangle-hold.

Zaharias [illegible] addition to being blessed with tremendous strength, is thoroughly schooled in the fundamentals of wrestling. He says he will outwrestle as well as outrough Danno tonight, and then demand a return tussle with George.

O'Mahoney is the darling with the speculative element and will enter the ring a 10 to 8 favorite. They believe the youthful Celt will score his twenty-second consecutive victory since coming to the United States.

Following his arrival in Boston after a successful campaign in the West, O'Mahoney went to Jerry Buckley's Gym to [illegible] his final workout.

Jack Sharkey, [illegible] boxing champion, [illegible] the padded mittens and gave Danno some tips on punching [illegible] use in the event Zaharias uses illegal tactics tonight.

"O'Mahoney is a natural puncher," said Sharkey. "He throws his right hand right off his shoulder without pulling it back an inch.

"I was at ringside the night O'Mahoney belted Rudy Dusek in the mouth. The force of the blow drove Dusek's teeth through his lower lip.

"I like the way Danno barrages with both hands when hard pressed by an unruly opponent. He has courage, too, and exceptional intelligence. He would knock out the average run of heavyweight boxers."

O'Mahoney then wrestled while Sharkey boxed in an effort to determine if a wrestler could beat a boxer in a "mixed" bout. Time was called before either man gained an advantage.

Sharkey will be at the ringside tonight and [illegible] the event Zaharias [illegible] a punching duel.

It is expected that [illegible] crowd ever to see O'Mahoney [illegible] will attend tonight.

MORE HOCKEY

HOCKEY will return to the Garden next week when the Bruin Cubs play the Providence Reds in the first game of the Fontaine Cup series. Three out of five games will decide the winner.

* * *

The Cubs-Reds games have drawn large crowds all season. These clubs always manage to furnish the fans with plenty of thrills.

* * *

Hockey has had a good season, both from a playing and financial viewpoint.

* * *

Sunday hockey will help the Bruin Cubs next season. Their schedule will be arranged so as to give them as many Sunday dates as possible.

* * *

Charles F. Adams does not believe Sunday hockey will be any advantage to the Bruins.

"Tuesday night is a hockey institution," Adams told me. "We shall continue to play regularly Tuesday night.

"It is possible that we shall play a few of our usual Saturday games on Sunday. This will be beneficial to the players in the event they also have a Friday game billed."

* * *

ICE CASUALTIES

I ASKED Adams if it would not be possible to lengthen the schedule of the Bruins so as to [illegible] both Saturday and Sunday games.

"No," he replied. "Such a program would ruin my club. We have plenty of casualties with our present schedule.

"If we were to play more games, Art Ross and Frank Patrick would have to be used as pinch hitters before the season closed."

* * *

Adams says Suffolk Downs is waiting for the [illegible] Racing Commission [illegible] for a license is [illegible] like to start the [illegible] construction as soon as possible.

* * *

Why all the [illegible]?

* * *

* * *

Next Wednesday is set as the day when the Racing Commission will make known its plans for horse racing. It can save itself many headaches by granting a license for a horse track at once.

* * *

DOG RACING

REVERE is almost certain to have dog racing. It is an amusement center, and there is not much real opposition to a dog track in Revere.

A dog track will help bring people to Revere during the Summer months. This will help all amusement enterprises in that city.

* * *

Hotels, restaurants and taverns will also cut in on the money that will be spent by the people who will visit the dog track.

* * *

SHORE PLAYS GAME IN DAZED MANNER

Hub Team Helpless

By Walter Kiley

Toronto, Ont., March 29—One down and two to go to Toronto Maple Leafs, the Bruins' couse looked bleak today.

One-all going into the third game of the National League championship play off series, the first on Toronto ice, our Bruins came off a badly beaten second best, 3-0

Battered and bruised, victims of costly injuries which tended toward their downfall, the Bruins displayed all the willingness and fight which forged them into the leadership of the American division.

44 SECONDS

As a spectacle, the third game could hardly measure up to the two previous gruelling Boston encounters. It lacked the fire and the dash and the hot and heavy fireworks which characterized its predecessors.

But it had its moments.

The game is on. Marty Barry gathers the puck. He sails down the ice. He is stopped by the Toronto defense.

Frank Finnigan, one of the unsung heroes of the series, is on it like a flash.

Gathering momentum with every stride, he flashes by the blue line, passes to Billy Thomas, who flicks it past Tiny Thompson in just 44 seconds of play.

It matters little that the Sorrel-topped rookie, Nick Metz, late of Eddie Powers' Syracuse farm, converts a second period pass from red-haired Horner to forge to a 2-0 lead.

Or that the Hell-bent-for-leather twins, Harvey Jackson and Chuck Conacher, later combine to tally a third and entirely unnecessary final period goal.

To be brutally frank there is little more to be said of the third game.

And strange as it may seem, Eddie Shore, the great Eddie who was cheered and jeered by the Toronto thousands, played throughout almost two full periods unconscious of what it was all about.

SHORE IN FOG

Eddie crashed with Clancy in the early stages of the opening period. He went blotto. Darkness descended on him. He was dead on his feet and failed to penetrate the fog until leaving the dressing room for the second period.

He had to ask the period and remembered nothing of the first period and very little of the second. It wasn't the Eddie of old.

But in justice, and not in any way attempting to alibi the Boston showing, let it be said that Dit Clapper's knee injury was the largest contributing factor to the downfall.

Garfield Bouts Tonight

An attractive program of top-notchers are scheduled at the Garfield A. A. amateur boxing show tonight at the Walk-thon Arena, Revere Beach boulevard. The classes are 118, 126, 135, 147 (novice) and 160 pounds.

Among the entries received are Barney [illegible], Walter [illegible], Phil Salvatore, [illegible] Dalton and Al Fernande.

Holdouts Still Grumbling

By Joe Cashman

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28—While admitting there were unsigned players in the ranks of the Braves, Manager Bill McKechnie today said he expected no more walkouts until the Southern training trip was finished. Then efforts will be made to bring those unsatisfied into the fold.

[illegible] broke the silence of the malcontents by saying he would not settle for less than he asked for.

Ed Brandt and Fred Frankhouse rallied to the defense of the club, insisting they had agreed to terms but rumor still lingered that they had not.

McKechnie said he will take no further steps to bring the group of nine into line unless he receives orders from Boston to do so.

Here's something more pleasant. Bobby Brown has been told he may start throwing curves.

Which means, my friends, that as far as his famed fire ball and control are concerned, the Hub Howitzer has finally regained the 1932 form which made him the rookie sensation of the year.

He removed the last shred of doubt about that by his showing in the final four frames of the Thursday tilt with the Cincinnati Reds.

He blanked the Dressen Dolls with a straight ball that whistled across the plate with the speed of forked lightning and never once took that weird hop over the catcher's noggin which it did so often when he pitched last year.

Bobby has wanted to throw hooks for weeks, insisting that he was completely recovered from the arm ailment that rendered him useless the past two seasons, but Bill McKechnie prohibited him from putting anything but speed on the ball.

GROVE On Mound FOR RED SOX

By Bill Grimes

Sarasota, Fla., March 29—One of the largest crowds of the season is expected at Payne Park this afternoon when Robert Moses Grove makes his first appearance of the season on the mound for the Red Sox against the Phillies.

It will be the first time that the local fans have had an opportunity to see Grove pitch, for due to an ailing arm, Lefty was unable to show here last spring.

Instead of taking that long hot bus ride to Winter Haven, Grove stayed here and warmed up with Rick Ferrell, who believes Lefty will be firmly convinced after today's game that he has completely recovered from the ailment which almost caused him to quit the game a year ago.

Langevich New 'Find' At N. U.

The axe falls on the Husky baseball candidates following tomorrow afternoon's practice, according to Coach Al McCoy. The present squad includes [illegible].

Meanwhile, McCoy's perennially dour mien has allowed a smile to appear since the unexpected appearance of a mighty slugger.

Joe Langevich, unknown a week ago, can not only bat well, but can play all positions, and McCoy has already donned the mask on the Hyde Park newcomer.

The former Boston English lad has been pounding the ball all over the lot against all the N. U. hurlers.

Joe also has a fine throwing arm and could be used in an outfield post should he fail to qualify for the backstop job.

Which should be the better cigar?

The cigar on the left was a good 5c value for years. The other cigar—Bayuk PHILLIES—was the outstanding 10c brand for years. Both sell today for 5c.

Ask yourself . . ask any dealer . . which cigar should offer you the best value for your money.

Bayuk PHILLIES is NOT a regular 5c cigar. It contains tobaccos not commonly used in 5c cigars . . the finest of Havana and Domestic long-filler . . the finest Imported Sumatra wrapper.

It's the blend of these fine tobaccos that gives PHILLIES that distinctive MELLOW flavor—a flavor that has made PHILLIES the largest-selling cigar at any price in America.

If you haven't tried PHILLIES—consider this. Why buy a regular 5c cigar when you can enjoy this guaranteed former 10c brand for the same money?

BAYUK'S GUARANTEE

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (Familiarly known as "Philadelphia Handmade") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Domestic and Havana long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

CARDS In Detroit? HA-HA

"INEVITABLE," SAYS FRICK

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Sports Editor

New York, March 29—Sam Breadon, impulsive fellow who'll let you have the button hole any time you'll let him have the shirt, may have been talking off the record when he told Sid Keener that he'd like to transfer the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals to Detroit.

But take it from Ford C. Frick, the boy president of the National League, somebody is going to transfer something to Detroit within a few years, the town being strictly a two-club spot.

"It's inevitable," said Mr. Frick, who draws between $20,000 and $25,000 a year and he feels he has to talk the part.

Meantime, Mr. Will Harridge, president of the American League, said nothing. Mr. Harridge, I believe, is particularly good at that sort of thing and this time his justification is practically superb.

Let the National League come into the champion American League city with the club that kicked the latter around in the World Series no later than six months ago? Don't make Mr. Harridge laugh. He's out of practice.

15 O. K.'S

In order that there be no misunderstanding, it might as well be stated that transfers of this kind cannot be made without the unanimous consent of all the remaining clubs, including the one owned and operated by Frank Navin in Detroit. The latter is a very sick man and sooner or later he may agree to an invasion of his [illegible].

But when he does, it will be at a price and the invading club will not be a factor in the rival race. In other words, the Cards may move into Detroit at such time as they may be faltering about in the second division and Mr. Breadon is down to his last for une.

The price, by the way, might be as much as $100,000 a year rental for Navin Field, provided the invading club does not share in the payment of taxes and upkeep. If it does, the price probably would be shaded.

Best Hitters Will Make B.C. Nine

The battle for the infield berths on Coach Frank McCrehan's Eagle nine will not be decided until the "Silver Fox" gets his charges out on the diamond at University Heights and tests their slugging qualities.

Right now, down at the Armory every afternoon, two infields are [illegible]. The one is a veteran aggregation, while the other is made up of two sophs and two former utility men.

Co-Captains Bob Curran and Dave Concannon are at first and second respectively on the veteran group with Pete O'Flaherty at shortstop and Tim Ready, last year's catcher, at third.

John Kilderry, a classy junior, is shining at the initial sack on the newer infield. Two sophomores, Tom Morris and Jim John, are [illegible] almost flawlessly at shortstop and second while George Mahoney, a former Exeter star, is at third.

Coach McCrehan is staying at the Armory only until the field at University Heights is ready for baseball practice. He hopes to have his ball players on their own turf by next Monday.

English Youth Flops in Water Hazard

By Associated Press

Aintree, Eng., March 29—Early arrivals on the scene of the Grand National steeplechase were treated to an unexpected entertainment today when a high-spirited young English gentleman, whose identity was undisclosed, attempted to hurdle the 16-foot water jump in front of the grandstand without the benefit of a horse.

He tripped over the hedge at the takeoff, however, and landed squarely on his stomach in the muddy water on the other side while thousands cheered.

Brookline Girl Enters Net Final

Miss Katherine Winthrop of Brookline, top seeded entrant, advanced to the finals of the N. E. women's indoor tennis championships at the Longwood covered courts this morning by edging Miss Virginia Ellis, 8—6, 6—3 in a semi-final.

The match was one of the best of the tournament to date, Miss Winthrop for the first time this week was forced to fight hard with Miss Ellis playing grade A tennis.

Miss Ellis started at a fast pace and led 5-4 in the opening set. Miss Winthrop squared it at 5-5, then went to 6-5. Miss Ellis drew up on even terms again.

Miss Winthrop won the next two games and set. In the second set action was brisk, though Miss Winthrop had a bit the better of the going throughout.

WILSON'S Top Choice IN 2ND

SMUGGLED IN IN OPENER

By Dave Wilson

BEST—WILLOW WOOD, 2D

Tropical Park, Fla., March 29—Willow Wood, R. W. Collin's clever juvenile, appears to need only intelligent handling to grace the winner's circle in the four furlongs dash of the second race here tomorrow afternoon.

FIRST RACE
Smuggled In, Screen, Romola.

SMUGGLED IN is my preference for the opener. His winning race his touting should be a repeat. The shifty SCREEN will be no worse than second, while ROMOLA will be battling it out for the short end.

SECOND RACE
WILLOW WOOD, PELORIA, JAIR

WILLOW WOOD, the best here. Wright will be up on PELORIA and will offer the contention JAIR has been knocking at the door in its recent starts.

THIRD RACE
STARE, FLIGHT OF GOLD, BEFITTING

What I know about this sleeper STARE will surprise the boys. Has been waiting for the spot for over a month. Irish Jimmy's FLIGHT OF GOLD and BEFITTING should follow in like order.

FOURTH RACE
VOLTA MAID, ABNER, JIRASOL

VOLTA MAID will like the mile of the fourth and will be closely attended by the improving ABNER. Clockers favor the Argentinan JIRASOL 2ND for the short.

FIFTH RACE
DON GUZMAN, SABULA, CHIEF MOURNER

Although top weighted DON GUZMAN has the class to win the feature race of the card. F. M. Alger's SABULA worked briskly for this event. CHIEF MOURNER may upset the figures.

SIXTH RACE
GOLDEN ROCK 2D, VIOLENA, SPEEDMORE, FLINT SHOT

GOLDEN ROCK 2D is one that they talk about. All the wise boys will be riding with VIOLENDA today. The disappointing SPEEDMORE should do better than he did Thursday. Morning works indicate that FLINT SHOT is on razor edge and will prove the danger.

SEVENTH RACE
RELATIVITY, SCOTCH SOLDIER, HIGH SOCKS

RELATIVITY has a liking for this track and has only to run to its last race to beat thes. Toss out SCOTCH SOLDIER'S last race. Too bad to be true. HIGH SOCKS is about due to give the boys a thrill.

EIGHTH RACE
WALKALONG, SAND RUNNER, ST. OMER

WALKALONG should do just that. Walk right in to wind up the days offerings, if my clockers' information is to be a criterion. SAND RUNNER and ST. OMER will lead the rest of the band in the order named.

B. U. and N. U. Get Together

But Only as Members of Olympic Sextet

Northeastern and Boston University, who haven't been on athletic speaking terms for the past few years, will play side by side when the Boston Olympics battle the Chicago Baby Ruths for the national amateur hockey crown this weekend.

Paul Rowe and Johnny Lax of B. U. and Charley Letourneau of N. U. will form the Olympics' second forward line when the Boston finalists face the western champs at New York and Chicago in two games, total score counting.

Rowe and Lax were the outstanding Terrier stickmen this past season, while Charley Letourneau played his best seasons with the Huskies.

Herb Gallagher, 1934 N. U. hockey leader, also a member of the Olympics, is not expected to leave tonight with the other puckchasers for the Empire City.

Herb has been ill since the semi-finals at New York several weeks ago.

MAILERS Pin WINNERS

IN POSTOFFICE LEAGUE

By Ed Cogswell

For the fourth consecutive year, the Mailing Division team carried off top honors and cash in the Postoffice League at the North Station alleys, and, not content with this, also compiled the high three-string total of 1548.

The other team prize for high single was won by Back Bay, 551.

In the individual events the officers of the league grabbed off all of the prizes, President Thomas O'Brien having the best average of 102, Treasurer Frank Regan the high single with 148, and Secretary Otto Roth the three-string with 355.

Bill Harting

One of the interesting features of the season's bowling was the pinch rolling of Jack Gayton who filled in with six different teams and, though over 65 years of age, came through with an average string of 10?.

Just to do some record shooting on his own account, Bill Harting of Norwood got after the pins in earnest at the South Station alleys. When the string was completed he had accounted for 181, which bettered the alley record by one pin.

In this record breaking feat Harting started off with a nine box. Then came five spares, a nine box and three strikes.

Harting is no novice in the sport. For the past four years he has bowled with the Psi Delta Club in the Boston Congregational Church League at Jamaica Plain.

Latest from the National Duckpin tournament at Washington, D. C. shows Al Reade, Norfolk, Va., having 403 in the singles. A. Carter-J. Wallace, Norfolk, Va., with 732 [illegible] Metro Pictures, Bethesda, Md., having 1694.

Boston Day in the tournament has been set for April 6. Red Millar has a team of Boston All-Stars getting in condition for the event, while George McConville and Paul Poehler will bowl in the singles and doubles.

Giants Big Four

In Mid-Season Form

By Associated Press

Mobile, Ala.—The New York Giants' pitching "Big Four" seems as effective as ever this year. In 68 innings hurled by Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, Freddy Fitzsimmons and Roy Parmelee, the opposition has been held to less than 1½ earned runs for each nine stanzas, a pennant-winning figure in any league.

Clearwater, Fla.—Cutting of the New York Yankees' squad was begun with the release of Pitchers Howard (Red) LaFlamme and Mike Salinsensen to the Newark Bears. Jesse Hill appears to have won a major league berth, and the signing of Dixie Walker to a regular contract indicated Outfielder Myril Hoag may be the next to go.

Kissimmee, Fla.—Another reason why the Dodgers have been making life miserable for their exhibition game rivals this spring is the added speed of Tony Cuccinello. Tony, never noted for his spryness afoot, has been covering more ground than ever around second base, has stretched a couple of singles into doubles and even has pilfered a couple of bases.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—With a record of four consecutive wins Connie Mack's Athletics return today to the exhibition game wars for another battle with Chattanooga.

In the first game the A's had 15 members of their squad on the score sheet by the time they won 16-13. Tomorrow they go to Atlanta.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Chief Euel Moore, Indian twirler for the Phillies, faces Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox today. The Phillies yesterday broke a three-game losing streak by defeating the Sox 5 to 3.

Bartow, Fla.—Bill Walker and Bud Tinning will toss the apple for the St. Louis Cardinals in the exhibition game against Rochester of the International League here today. Tom Carey, reserve infielder, was released yesterday to Rochester and will play with that club today.

West Palm Beach, Fla.—The St. Louis Browns went through a regular practice session today in preparation for another exhibition game tomorrow with Buffalo of the International League at Fort Lauderdale. The Brownies beat the Bisons 7 to 3 there yesterday.

Biloxi, Miss.—Bidding good-by to Biloxi, the hit-hungry Washington Senators set out today on their barnstorming trip that will take them to the capital just before the opening of the major league season. Manager Bucky Harris refused to become perturbed over the conspicuous lack of hitting. Yesterday's clouting efforts in losing to Kansas City, 5 to 1, totaled four runs.

Tucson, Ariz.—George Earnshaw's best goal this season is 20 pitching victories, 10 of which would be worth $500 each under the terms of his bonus contract with the Chicago White Sox, is working overtime to master a trade secret whispered to him by Waite Hoyt of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The new baffler is called the "slider." Earnshaw tried it for the first time yesterday as he held the Pirates to three hits in four innings.

Los Angeles—The threat of being demoted to a part time job in the Chicago Cubs' outfield apparently has stirred Chuck Klein into a hitting mood.

Yesterday he got a home run, double and a single in three times at bat. The day before he hit for the circuit off a southpaw.

Tucson, Ariz.—Coming into Tucson today for another try at the Chicago White Sox, the Pirates found their barnstorming schedule upset as far as games in San Antonio, Tex., are concerned.

A new stadium there hasn't been completed so the Bucs and Sox may stay an extra day in El Paso and then rest Monday.

Lakeland, Fla.—Schoolboy Rowe is slated to see mound action today against the Boston Braves at St. Petersburg. The Brooklyn Dodgers drove Alvin Crowder out of the box with a 12 hit attack in the first five innings yesterday and went on to sweep the four-game series with Detroit 9 to 1.

Peabody After Ostergren

Peabody high wants Fred Ostergren to coach its football team.

So badly, in fact, that it has offered him $4500 a year if he will take the post.

But Ostie wants to teach in addition to his coaching, and Peabody does not care to hire a teacher-coach.

Meantime, Ostergren is pursuing the even tenor of his way at Arlington high, where he has met with great success in the past few years.

Harvard Nine to Go South

Mitchell Will Take 17 Along Next Week

With Harvard's last chance for sports supremacy for 1934-35 resting on its baseball team, the Harvard nine will leave next week on its spring tour.

Hoping to leave one bright spot on the otherwise dark records of this year's Harvard teams, the ball club will go at top speed to upset such strong teams as Villanova, Navy, Georgetown, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The crucial test will come on April 6, when Harvard meets Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The Quakers were runner-up for the league championship last year and are this year's choice for winner.

Coach Fred Mitchell, who will take along 17 on the trip, emphasized the fact that no final squad has as yet been picked.

Tentative lineup for Villanova on April 2 has Gibbs at first, Bilodeau at second, Adzigian at third, and Woodruff at short.

Either Lincoln or Braggiotti will be on the Crimson mound and Maguire will receive.

Five Sophs On Tech Varsity

Strong winds, sweeping down over the Charles, prevented Bill Haines from holding his first time trial of the year for his varsity eight which must race against Yale on April 20, three weeks away.

Pat Manning, the veteran boatbuilder who has been watching Tech crews for many years and preceded Bill Haines as admiral of the Cardinal and Gray fleet, feels confident that this year's shell is faster than that of 1934, despite the presence of five inexperienced sophomores in the first crew.

With Guy Haines stroking the shell and backed up by Arthur Haskins at number seven slide, the Engineers have nothing to fear in the "engine" room.

It is at mid-shell that Haines is now concentrating his efforts. Birch, Thorson, Hazeltine and Ferguson are all sophs who rowed with the freshmen a year ago and yet have to be tested in a gruelling race.

BENNY Gets to Town Just in Time to Eat

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The conversation got around to Chinese food.

Jack Benny and his delightful wife, who is Mary Livingston of his radio program and who is with him for a week's engagement at the Metropolitan, which began today, were ecstatic. No less.

"I'm rushing down to Chinatown for dinner," said Jack "And Mary's keeping step because Boston has the best Chinese restaurant — But first I must tell you about Amos and Andy in a Chinese restaurant in Durham, North Carolina."

George Holland

It seems, according to Mr Benny that Amos and Andy have a dual penchant for Chinese food But in Durham the only Chinese restaurant they found proved to be thoroughly unsatisfactory

* * *

Amos ate part of his meal and demanded the check

He restrained himself from expressing an opinion of the quality of the food while tipping the waiter, but Amos, and Andy too by now were fuming when they reached the cashier's cage

There a placid Oriental an old one with a beard was making change for the customers

"Have you ever heard of Lung Fow's in New York city?" Amos demanded and Andy had his ears cupped for the answer "Lung Fow's serves Chinese food, real Chinese food and THIS food of yours is terrible."

No answer Not even a shrug

* * *

Amos began banging the cashier's counter

"You no serves good food," Amos went on, his rage assuming proportions. "Your food is distinctly horrible. Lung Fow in New York, he serves real good food. Lung Fow——"

The Durham Chinese held up his hand

"Lung Fow loses his shirt. We make money."

* * *

Only the Oriental restaurateur's reply was couched in the American idiom which made it very comical if slightly unprintable Mr and Mrs Benny had dinner at Ruby Foo's The Den They are sure that here in Boston The Den serves the best Chinese menu in America

* * *

Jack gave an analysis of his success under probing by Eliot Norton He is sure that he has become the No. 1 comedian of the airwaves because he allots only a few of the laughs to himself Parker the singer, Wilson, the comedian, Sam Hearn the good vaudevillian are given the majority of laughs in the Benny radio scripts

Jack pointed out that his tremendous success was no sudden event . . . He has been three years on the air . . .

Mr Benny thinks Sam H Harris is the best producer in New York . . He will give Mr Harris a manuscript he likes if he finds one And there may be a Benny show for the legitimate theaters next fall

* * *

Jack goes to Hollywood pretty soon to make a picture. His part will be that of a Broadway columnist If that picture goes well he will then play the part of a smart thief in another one. He is one of the most pleasing personalities you will ever meet. And the radio editors, who know him better than I do, tell me he is a grand guy. He seems so.

Al has just signed a new contract with Jack Warner which not only calls for his services as an actor but as a producer as well

STOCK MARKET

Action GIVEN Study

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The stock market is doing its best to level out. There is a strong possibility this will not be accomplished without a further decline.

In review: The list after the mid-March tumble, scrambled back in a [illegible] to [illegible] pieces of [illegible] path more [illegible] have [illegible] the [illegible] market [illegible] ad[illegible]

All [illegible] be [illegible] be doing their best [illegible] are a long term [illegible] not as badly off as broad market action might lead one to believe. They are struggling with or successfully to make a bottom. Numbered among the industrials are such leaders as Steel, American Can and Chrysler. The rails are the sore spot and, to aggravate matters are at the mercy of unpredictable [illegible] last [illegible] come close to fixing matters sufficiently to talk about a real upswing.

Notebook: We are willing to compromise on the 92-94 level as a final bottom for the industrials . . . Call it 93-95 . . . Owen D Young and Gerard Swope have supplied share-wealth advocates with something to think about . . . In their official capacities as chairman and president of General Electric they report an increase in average number of workers in 1934 . . . But more important, an increase in average annual earnings per worker amounting to 13.9 per cent . . . Fundamental sharing of wealth . . . Which in the last analysis is only what capital and labor can collectively produce.

Railroad [illegible] matters [illegible] light [illegible] to avoid a [illegible] affair. Next [illegible] well outlined [illegible] great [illegible] ownership [illegible] be the driving force behind the move. Shorts: With Coca Cola flitting around the 200 mark, it will be all right for market letter writers to take that almost forgotten phrase about "blue chips out of moth balls . . . Atchison is down to the level prevailing two years ago today . . . No reflection of recovery there . . . 35 flat is the last outpost of this sadly fallen favorite . . . News Flash: Western copper interests are concerned about renewal of the 4 cent a pound tariff that expires in June . . . So, too, should buyers of domestic copper shares at current and higher levels.

PUBLIC
INFLATION

[illegible] inflation [illegible] declares [illegible]

[illegible] clamors for the [illegible] of investments [illegible] which would certainly [illegible] lower in any kind of inflation—United States government notes and bonds, municipals of the first quality, and prime corporation bonds.

In 1928 United States bonds sold around 1.0 to yield over 4 per cent on the average; these bonds sell around 1.08 to yield less than 3 per cent. Prime corporation bonds selling around 85-91 in 1928 today are in demand at 109-115.

Municipals in 1928 averaged a yield of 4⅛ per cent; today they yield but 3½ per cent.

This house concludes that all signs in the security markets point away from inflation.

N. E. Public Service Income Up

Gross operating income of the [illegible] of the New England Public Service Company [illegible] was $18,834,019 and net [illegible] amounted to $8,181,410. [illegible] discloses that while the gross operating revenue increased 3 per cent over 1933 the net earnings were virtually the same in both years.

Walter S. Wyman, president, says that the total tax cost of the utility subsidiaries for 1934, including various federal taxes, was $2,[illegible]. That was 14.49 per cent of the gross operating income as compared with 13.11 per cent in 1933.

The gross sales of merchandise units by the group amounted to $1,675,395 for the year 1934, compared with $1,088,862 for 1933, a 54 per cent increase.

Texas Corp. Reports 1934 Profit

Net profits of The Texas Corporation and subsidiaries in 1934, after all charges, were $5,545,205, as compared with a deficit of $491,004 in the previous year.

The company's pamphlet [illegible] which has been mailed to stockholders, shows that [illegible] in 1934 were $268,214,921. Gross operating income in 1934 totaled $272,618,752 as compared with $236,830,376 reported in 1933.

The balance of earnings, before interest, depreciation, depletion, Federal taxes, etc. was $41,338,671. Interest and amortization of discount and expense on funded debt totalled $5,737,788. During 1934, the corporation charged $28,941,894 against earnings, for depreciation, depletion, etc.

The consolidated balance sheet as of December 31, 1934 shows total assets of $174,812,418. Current assets of $151,940,852 compared with current liabilities of $32,468,389.

Cash and marketable securities total $30,578,178. Properties, plant and equipment carried at $565,319,003, less $300,585,022 reserve for depreciation, depletion etc, which gives a net depreciated value of $264,733,011.

The report states that during 1934 the corporation adopted several important changes in accounting procedure, intended to reflect more closely the normal result of annual operations.

As a result of these changes in accounting procedure, the basis for reporting earnings differed in certain important respects from the basis used in 1933.

The net unrealized profits of $5,716,514 resulting from conversion of the net current assets of foreign subsidiaries into U. S. dollars was credited to earned surplus in 1933.

In 1934, however, unrealized conversion loss of $406,687 was charged against profit and loss for the year.

Devaluation of Belga Necessary

By Associated Press

Premier Van Zeeland of Belgium told the Parliament at Brussels that immediate devaluation of not more than 30 per cent in the belga was necessary at once and asked the legislators for a vote of confidence in this program.

All bourses in Belgium have been closed for the week-end and when trading reopens Monday the gold value of the belga will be 75 per cent of its previous worth.

The government leader announced at the same time that Belgium would suspend gold payments pending an international agreement on currency policy, thereby virtually ending Belgium's alignment with the gold bloc—the European nations who remain on gold as the standard of their currency.

From both Amsterdam and Rome came announcements that the monetary policies of the Netherlands and Italy would not be affected by the Belgian action.

RAIL SHARES STEADY

New York, March 29—Financial markets received the news of Belgium's devaluation with equanimity today and, encouraged by several bright spots in the domestic economic picture, steered a fairly steady course.

Stocks received their greatest inspiration from railroad shares and pivotal industrials, although the early backwardness of utilities and some of the metals was disappointing. Rails were helped along by firming tendencies in utility loans.

Union Pacific and Santa Fe, both of which had been singled out in recent sessions when the demand for carrier shares was at a low point, assumed leadership at the beginning of trading and worked up about a point before yielding part of the advantage.

New York Central, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Pennsylvania were among others, following along with smaller advances. Shares of the St. Paul were active at declines ranging around ⅛ of a point.

Pivotal industrial shares continued to enjoy a good market. Coca Cola made its contribution by attaining the 200 mark, up more than a point from the previous day, and other specialties were brought out at higher prices, including Air Reduction, Allied Chemical and Bohn Aluminum and Brass.

Others prominent on the up side included U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, General Electric, Sears Roebuck, Standard Oil of N. J., and National Distillers.

Utilities Mixed

Although there was little stock offered, leading utilities were inclined to become tired and made little progress.

American Telephone was a trifle higher but Consolidated Gas dipped fractionally. Metal stocks were hesitant despite the excellent showing revealed in the annual report of Kennecott.

Cerro de Pasco and U. S. Smelting were among others selling a shade lower but Kennecott and American Smelting were about even.

The railroad situation, long a sore spot on the economic body, received two more potent stimulants right on top of the clarification afforded by the developments affecting the St. Paul yesterday.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, announced that the government agency would refinance Colorado & Southern's $20,000,000 bonds maturing on May 1, which eliminated all doubt about this issue.

Another development affecting the carriers was the decision of the Senate interstate commerce committee to investigate railroad financing.

BOSTON PRICES
Are Irregular

Boston market dealings today were at a slow pace.

Changes were mostly fractional and of a minor nature.

Torrington stood out with a loss of one point at 74. But other industrials were lifeless.

Edison of Boston managed a small gain of ⅜ to 110⅝.

A long list of issues including United Shoe, Bridgeport Brass and Swift were unchanged.

Bar Gold

London, March 29 (AP)—Bar gold declined 1 shilling 2½ pence to 143s 8d (U. S. equivalent $34.61).

Silver Lower

New York, March 29 (AP)—Bar silver barely steady, ⅛ lower at 60⅝.

PLAN
POPULAR

DELUDES MANY MILLIONS

By B. C. Forbes

This will interest every thoughtful citizen and Washingtonians:

Dr. Townsend's $200-a-month pension plan for all over sixty has attracted far more enthusiastic followers than Huey Long's share-the-wealth scheme.

This writer recently devoted a column to explaining why neither dream could be fulfilled, how it would be utterly impossible to put [illegible] into practice.

Townsenders' protests outnumber protests [illegible] Hueyites by ten to one.

B. C. Forbes

Almost all the denouncers, instead of attempting to demonstrate how $2,400-a-year pensions [illegible] the sharing up of wealth can be put into practice, confine themselves to [illegible] name-branding me [illegible] lost [illegible] to the trials and tribulations of the poor. Thus starts off one letter:

"Were you ever hungry? Were you ever homeless? Was there ever a time when you were broke, with no place to go—and not your fault? Have you a father and mother whom you might try to imagine sick, poor, turned out of what they thought would be their home? . . . Imagine an old man of 60 working with a pick-shovel charity chain gang seven days a month to feed his family. If you cannot mentally see this picture, you should not so unkindly criticise the Townsend pension plan . . ."

My [illegible] underdog is one reason why I feel it is so unfortunate that millions of poor [illegible] should be [illegible] into believing that either Dr. Townsend or Huey Long can possibly do for them [illegible].

It is [illegible] it is wicked to delude struggling families into believing that all of them can be made rich without effort on their part.

It simply isn't in the cards for those who [illegible] to provide $200 a month for every couple over 60. The total [illegible] of all Americans [illegible] a year or [illegible] of the depression, and it is estimated that Dr. Townsend's [illegible] would absorb 20 billions a year.

Thus [illegible] national income to expand greatly, such a burden would still be unbearable.

The plans now being considered by Congress for distributing money to the aged and to the unemployed would run into very large sums to be levied upon producers and taxpayers.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW CHEERFUL

OBSTACLES ARE OVERCOME

New York, March 29—Dun & Bradstreet in its weekly trade review declared today business is pushing aside decisively the impediments which have been hindering its progress.

The report sees the nation's trade as taking full advantage of the normal seasonal rise to provide momentum which will carry it beyond the reach of enervating extraneous influences.

Following the more or less static conditions of the past four weeks the report notes, industrial operations are starting to rise, as preparations are being completed for new peaks for the year to be reached in April, while in distributive branches the spring season is off to an auspicious start, with consumer buying giving assurance of Easter sales surpassing the high levels of a year ago.

To the progress made doubtless can be attributed the greater confidence now being taken in expansion and long-term planning, as new financing finally has shown signs of revival, with new issues running to the largest total for any week since the early part of 1933.

With the influx of fresh stocks of the most appealing merchandise which has been assembled in many seasons, shoppers crowded the stores in the leading centers of distribution, pushing retail sales in nearly all districts higher than a week earlier, with the gain in some instances rising to 20 to 30 per cent.

Retail sales for the week, taking the country as a whole, were higher by 3 to 10 per cent than for the comparative period of 1934.

An actual need for a wide variety of merchandise is strongly apparent and now that the realization is more generally accepted that no price reduction of significance will appear during the next six months, the release of long-deferred orders may tax productive capacity well into May.

Nat. Distillers

National Distillers Products Corp declared regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common, payable May 1 to stock of record April 15.

Three months ago the dividend of 50 cents was designated "a dividend."

I. R. T. Refunding

Guaranty Trust Co is receiving written offers of Interborough Rapid Transit Co first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds, due Jan 1, 1966, up to the close of business April 1, 1935, to exhaust $1,556,352 now on deposit in sinking fund.

RAIL
Problems to FORE

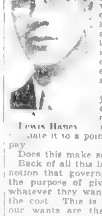
U. S. OWNERSHIP DISCUSSED

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, March 29—Yesterday I saw a newspaper headline as follows: "Railroad deficits increasing; U. S. ownership discussion gains." This heading, I think, holds a world of meaning. Think it over.

The idea it suggests to me is that the railways can't pay their way. They can't earn enough to cover costs. Therefore, because they are unprofitable, the government should run them.



Lewis Haney

The idea suggested is that whenever an economic activity is clearly unable to justify itself by income, it becomes a fit object of government ownership.

All we need to justify federal ownership and operation of any industry is to [illegible] date it to a point where it can't pay.

Does this make sense?

Back of all this lies the insidious notion that government exists for the purpose of giving its citizens whatever they want—regardless of the cost. This is the notion that our wants are the only realities, and that costs need not be counted.

This is the basis for "wish thinking."

Say some section of the country wants a railway maintained which does not have enough traffic to pay. Say frequent [illegible] schedules are wanted.

Say the grain farmers want rates reduced, both on their grain and on the things they buy.

Say [illegible] workers want shorter hours and higher pay.

The "wish thinker" says, "let them have these things."

But what about costs?

"Oh," says the wish thinker, "if the railway companies can't afford it, the government can. We must have government ownership. The government does not have to count costs."

The government will pay for these "services" by raising taxes. Or if taxes are burdensome, it will just borrow. And if its debts become burdensome, it can just issue "notes" instead of bonds. These note are "money." By making such money, the government can pay for anything without cost!

We are making "the government" the sacrificial goat. We send the bills to Uncle Sam. Are we forgetting that "the government" is all of us—that its costs are our costs, and that some day someone must pay?

First Mortgage 4% Bonds, Series "D"

Due July 1, 1963

Unconditionally guaranteed by endorsement as to both principal and interest jointly and severally, by Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company, The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company and The Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

All but not any part of Series "D" Bonds may be redeemed at the option of the Company on any interest date on and after July 1, 1940 at 105% and accrued interest on ninety days' notice.

CONTINENTAL ILLINOIS NATIONAL BANK AND TRUST COMPANY OF CHICAGO, Trustee.

The issue and guaranty of the above Bonds and their sale to the undersigned and their associates are subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission and all legal proceedings in connection with the issuance and sale thereof to the approval of counsel for the undersigned.

In the opinion of counsel these Bonds will be legal investments for savings banks in New York, if the bill now pending in the New York Legislature similar to the bills enacted in 1932, 1933 and 1934 is enacted. The New York law provides that up to April 1, 1935, the years 1931, 1932 and 1933 shall be excluded in determining whether railroad corporations have complied with the requirements of the Act. The bill now pending would extend the period to April 1, 1936, and also exclude the year 1934.

Copies of the circular dated March 28, 1935, describing these bonds and giving information regarding the Company may be obtained from the undersigned on request.

OFFERING PRICE 101% AND ACCRUED INTEREST TO DATE OF DELIVERY, TO YIELD 3.94% TO MATURITY.

Auditors' Report

TO THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, THE TEXAS CORPORATION: We have made an examination of the consolidated balance sheet of The Texas Corporation (a Delaware corporation) and subsidiary companies as at December 31, 1934, and of the statements of consolidated income and surplus for the year ended that date. In connection therewith, we examined or tested accounting records and other supporting evidence of the company, its domestic subsidiaries and certain of its foreign subsidiaries and obtained information and explanations from officers and employes of the companies; we also made a general review of the accounting methods and of the operating and income accounts for the year, but we did not make a detailed audit of the transactions. With respect to the foreign subsidiary companies whose accounts were not examined by us, we were furnished with reports of other independent auditors.

In accordance with the action of the Board of Directors, the following changes in accounting procedures were effected for the year 1934:

1. All intercompany and inter-departmental profits were eliminated from the book value of inventories, including profits taken on transportation and certain minor auxiliary operations which were not eliminated in the preceding year. The elimination of such items resulted in a reduction in the book value of inventories at December 31, 1933 of $[illegible] by a charge to earned surplus of that amount, and a credit to profit and loss for the year 1934 of $[illegible].

2. In 1934 the company included in profit and loss the unrealized profits and losses resulting from the conversion of the net current assets of foreign subsidiaries into United States dollars. In the preceding year the unrealized conversion profit of $5,716,513.83 was credited to earned surplus. The net unrealized conversion loss for 1934 amounted to $406,88[illegible].

3. The net loss on property retirements (excess of depreciated value over salvage or realizable value, including dismantling and removal costs) amounting to $1,870,436.81 for the year 1934 was charged to the reserve for depreciation. In the preceding year the retirement loss of $1,[illegible]8,969.[illegible] was charged to profit and loss.

4. As of January 1, 1934, the company adopted the policy of capitalizing labor and service costs of drilling producing wells and amortizing such costs on the basis of [illegible] per annum [illegible] in depreciating well casing. The amortization charge for 1934 amounted to $[illegible]16,827.48 and represents the amortization of drilling costs [illegible] for the year 1934, these costs having been charged to expense in prior years as incurred.

If drilling costs had been charged to expense in 1934 as in prior years, the net profits would have been reduced $[illegible],578,094.40.

Subject to the foregoing comments, in our opinion, based upon the examination referred to above, and the acceptance of the reports of other independent auditors for the subsidiaries examined by them, the accompanying consolidated balance sheet and related statements of consolidated income and surplus fairly present, in accordance with accepted principles of accounting, the financial position of the companies at December 31, 1934 and the results of their operations for the year ended that date. Further, in our opinion, such accounting principles have been maintained consistently during the year under review, and, subject to the foregoing comments, consistently with the preceding year.

"Hangman Who Smiled"

American Tortured and Held for Ransom in Mexico

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Doggone it, boys and girls, you know what tickles me about this Adventurers' Club of ours? Everyone in it is a REAL adventurer, him—or herself. There's only one condition to membership in Uncle Floyd's pet organization and that is, YOU'VE GOT TO BE AN ADVENTURER TO BELONG.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Jack Baker of Texas joins us today with a swell kidnaping story. Jack lives on Route 2, Midlothian, Texas, but his adventure takes us into old Mexico—to be exact, in April of the year 1926.

Jack and his partner were down that way doing some mine inspecting. One hot day, while they were examining the bottom of an old abandoned shaft, a Mexican peon climbed down and told them that General Juan Galindo wanted to see them.

General Galindo was one of the many roving bandit generals of those days and the boys knew better than to refuse to see him.

Jack says the General received them very ceremoniously. He was accompanied by four tough looking bandits who were loaded down with rifles and ammunition. The general bowed politely.

"I should be pleased," he said with a sly smile, "if the Senors would accompany me to inspect some mines nearby—as my guests."

Jack and his partner looked around at the little circle of Mexicans. Each one of them was fondling his rifle suggestively. The odds, Jack decided, were too great.

"We shall be pleased to go, General," he said bowing in turn.

Jack says that the party rode off into the mountains—looking more like guards and prisoners than hosts and guests but the General was the very soul of politeness. They arrived finally at an old Spanish hacienda—apparently long abandoned—and stopped.

"Please excuse my modest quarters," the General smiled. "Make yourselves at home but I must request that you do not try to leave."

Jack says they had been prisoners for several days before the General mentioned the fact. Then one morning he smiled more blandly than usual and calmly told them that they were being held for ransom.

"I am asking a paltry $6000 for your lives," he remarked.

"I'm not worth it," Jack laughed.

The General offered him a cigarette.

"I sincerely hope that your family thinks you are," he said, "because I would regret HAVING TO KILL YOU."

"You wouldn't dare to," Jack says he answered.

"Not only would I dare to but I must request now that you write a letter at once to your family telling them of my decision."

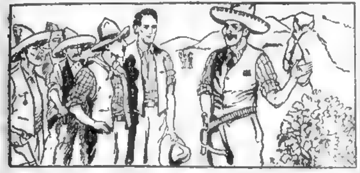
Jack says he tried to bluff it out and refused to write the note. The General, though, did not take his refusal seriously.

"You will write the note," he said confidently.

Then Galindo gave an order and in a few seconds Jack says a rope was around his neck and the bandits had jerked him off the ground. Two held his hands; his entire weight hung from the rope—the blood rushed to his head and he felt himself slowly strangling to death. Just as he felt consciousness leaving him the rope slackened and he fell to the ground gasping.

Jack says the General was right—he wrote the note.

General Galindo now became the perfect host. Nothing was too good for his prisoners but beneath his smiling exterior, Jack knew, was the cruelty of a wild beast.



Five days went by during which Jack and his partner were guarded night and day. The guards were becoming very surly and suggested killing the two "Gringos" but the General waved them away.

"Plenty of time for that," he said, "we shall wait for the ransom but if the gold does not come what is a life or two in times like this?"

Jack says that despite Galindo's smiling face and careless attitude he began to have a terror of the man. He seemed to be enjoying the mental torture he was inflicting on the Americans and wanted to prolong it—as a cat plays with a doomed mouse before killing it.

On the other hand, Jack thinks, the Mexican was enjoying their company. He was obviously an educated man and discussed affairs of the day with intelligence. The arrival of a messenger, however, broke up the General's calm.

"We must be moving," he said. "Perhaps it will be your last trip. A rescue party is searching for you but I am very much afraid that they shall never find you."

The bandits quickly left the hacienda and went into camp in the mountains. Some grumbled at the extra care of guarding the "Gringo" prisoners and Jack and his partner thought it would soon be all over with them. Galindo paid little attention to them now. He was too busy arranging for his own escape. But he still smiled.

That night the Federal forces found the bandits and attacked. Jack and his partner were standing by the sides of Galindo and his aide, Corrall, when the bullets started to fly. Jack says he expected the Mexican leaders to shoot them down any minute. But he was afraid to flee for fear of inviting a bullet in the back.

Corrall was the first to fall—shot through the head—he fell dead at their very feet. Then Galindo toppled over—mortally wounded. He could have shot Jack easily but instead he just smiled.

With the leaders gone the battle was over and Jack and his partner were soon on their way back to the States.

Jack says that bad as it was he thinks he'd rather be kidnaped by Mexicans than by the gentlemen who practise that trade in this country and I don't blame him.

Well, boys and girls, we'll meet again tomorrow with "Fire by the Roadside."

$10.00 EVERY DAY and $100.00 EVERY MONTH is what Floyd Gibbons will pay American readers to prove that more thrilling and interesting TRUE adventures happen in YOUR life and in the lives of your friends than anything fiction writers can invent. BOSTON Greets Radio BENNYS

MARY AND JACK ARRIVE IN HUB

By N. F. T.

His ancestors did not come over aboard the good ship Mayflower, nevertheless the radio funmaker, Jack Benny, claims he feels like a pilgrim every time he sets foot in our historic Bay State metropolis.

Such was the sentiment expressed when greetings were exchanged last night while this carcas was parked awhile with Jack and the "Mrs.," meaning Mary Livingston, upon their checking in on the Ritz-Carlton Hotel register.

"N. F. T."

Jack himself was anxious to go on record as saying that the pipe of peace has passed between he and Don Bestor, the orchestra overlord who prompts all the fun poking about his brogue adornment—spats to you.

Now to find Bestor, because when the suave and dapper broadcasting dry wit was donning his vest and coat, I took note of the very, very fancy suspenders he sports. Methinks he certainly should be on the receiving end of some spirited kidding about those. Such colorful galusses I never did see on man, boy or even in a haberdashery show window at Christmas time.

* * *

GANGS ALL HERE

In any event he's here, with his first stage appearance at the Metropolitan theater today. Also on hand are Mary, Frank Parker, Don Bestor and the orchestra. Incidentally, the latter group is doing Normandie ballroom dance music duty in order to be on hand for the coast to coast broadcast that will waft over the nation out of WBZ-WBZA studios in the Hotel Bradford on Sunday night.

In that connection, be it known that not a solitary ticket is available for the program presentation. Disappointing as the advice may be to many who have been all agog in anticipation of witnessing Benny and company work, the sorry situation is one that just cannot be helped.

Only so many people can be accommodated in the biggest WBZ studio. Therefore that, as they say in every language these days, is that.

Friends and professional associates are mourning the untimely passing of Will Dodge, who was taken by death early yesterday morning. Will was one of the pioneers in radio broadcasting hereabouts and has consistently contributed much fine classic and popular music to the local microphones.

Today at 12:30 finds Charles Hector, director of music at the Hotel Touraine, dedicating his period to the memory of Dodge, who at one point in his career was in charge of music at the same Tremont st. hostelry.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW NATIONAL DIRECTOR

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

Rounding the last pylon and diving for the finish line, seven squadrons are bunched in their race for the wing honor banner for the first quarter period.

These have been the most active in obtaining votes on the non-members' ballots in the Popular Pilot Poll, each vote counting one point toward the banner.

Spurred on by their leaders, members have worked for hours during the last month canvassing their school chums and playmates for votes. The leading squadrons and their commanders are: 47 of Roxbury, "Eddie" Munzing; 431 of East Boston, Sebastian Carco; 374 of East Boston, Santos Cassia; 18 of East Boston, Frank DeRosa 127 of Dorchester, Sidney Wallerstein; 23 of New Bedford, Joseph Giammalvo and 244 of Woonsocket, R. I., Hector Farland.

Sidney Wallerstein

The winner is in as much doubt as the victor in the pilot poll. To the squadron to which the banner is finally awarded will go congratulations from all while to the others can be said:

"You have run a wonderful race. Better luck next time!"

All squadron leaders are cautioned to have all ballots in the mail and postmarked no later than midnight Sunday. Today is the last time the members' ballot will appear in the American. Use it now to vote if you haven't already done so. Don't miss the chance to name the pilot you like best and the colors you think should be official Junior Birdmen colors.

BATTLE AXES Squadron 457 of Bristol, N. H. Commander, Wayne Gray.

This squadron held its first meeting which lasted an hour and resulted in the election of Wayne as commander and Armand Baron as captain. Seven of the eight members were present.

* * *

YANKEE BULLDOGS Squadron 285 of Bristol, N. H. Comander, Richard Blake.

The treasury is growing rapidly, Captain Harold Dodge reports as a result of the last meeting. A committee was selected to plan meetings and has succeeded in adding to the entertainment. Club members will be used this summer.

* * *

SPOT LIGHTERS Squadron 398 of Jamaica Plain. Comander, Louise Laree.

The first meeting was held in the commander's house and resulted in the selection of Lillian Panacello as captain, Dorothy Asmussen as sergeant-at-arms and Eva Panacello as librarian. Temporarily the latter was placed in charge of entertainment. Duties of each officer were explained and dues were decided upon.

* * *

HIGH FLYERS Squadron 348 of Lynn. Comander, Phil Cosores, Banner points, 11.

Captain Donald Damon called the meeting to order at 19 Stephen st. Dues were collected and after business was transacted the group worked on R. O. G. planes. There are now 12 members in the squadron.

The Forgotten Pledge

Platform Solemn Promise

A NATIONAL political platform is a solemn promise made to the people payable in PERFORMANCES, not REPUDIATIONS.

The first, and therefore the most vital, plank adopted by the Democratic Convention in Chicago in June, 1932, "solemnly promised"—

"AN IMMEDIATE AND DRASTIC REDUCTION OF GOVERNMENTAL EXPENDITURES BY ABOLISHING USELESS COMMISSIONS AND OFFICES, CONSOLIDATING DEPARTMENTS AND BUREAUS AND ELIMINATING EXTRAVAGANCE, TO ACCOMPLISH A SAVING OF NOT LESS THAN 25 PER CENT IN THE COST OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT."

This was the promise that restored the Democratic Party to power after twelve years by colossal pluralities.

WHAT does the PERFORMANCE show?

A myriad of NEW commissions, bureaus and boards have been created.

Instead of "eliminating extravagance" we have become not only the most extravagant country on the face of the globe but we have built up a BUREAUCRATIC SUPER-GOVERNMENT that dumbfounds and appalls—AN ALPHABETICAL TOWER OF BABEL.

Instead of the promised saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of running the Federal Government the official figures show this:

In 1932 the expenditures of the Government were $5,006,590,303. In 1934 they were $7,105,050,085—a PER CAPITA JUMP of $40.11 to $56.19!

THE second plank in this "solemnly" offered platform said:

"MAINTENANCE OF THE NATIONAL CREDIT BY A FEDERAL BUDGET ANNUALLY BALANCED."

What was the PERFORMANCE?

The EXCESS OF EXPENDITURES OVER RECEIPTS in 1934 was $3,989,496,035.42.

Was the Democratic platform a platform to end confidence in all platforms? To end confidence in all politicians and to end confidence in Democracy?

Help for Textiles

Any Real Assistance?

Recent developments in the textile field are significant.

They show a desire for help. That's better than indifference.

One big Massachusetts-Maine manufacturing concern takes its battle to the courts, questioning NRA constitutionality.

This concern seeks relief by injunction against code authorities.

Simultaneously in Washington NRA officials agree to "adjust production to consumer demand."

Translated, this means limiting machine operations.

Thus over-production is to be attacked from an angle unpleasing to labor.

Nothing is done about competition of Japanese textiles.

Nothing is done about increases in costs of raw material, due to cotton processing taxes.

Before long something will have to be done about BOTH of these neglected menaces.

When it IS done, another phase of recovery in New England can be expected to get under way.

Reward of $3750

Some Easy Money

Patrolman Francis D. Foley of Newburyport recently found a truck full of liquor on an old wharf.

The government decided it was smuggled. Foley's share of the reward is set at $3750.

That's easy money.

Knowledge that the Government pays 25 per cent of the value of smuggled goods to "news tippers" may prove a factor in suppressing bootleggers.

We hope it becomes widely known. Ending liquor smuggling would help law-abiding citizens.

5600 Are Rescued

Coast Guard Record Good

The annual report of the Coast Guard reveals that the service is living up to the glorious record of the past.

During 1934 the guardians of our coastline compiled a superlative record in maritime accomplishment.

Freed of the troubles of rum running to a large extent, because of repeal, the Coast Guard was able to return to its primary function of saving life and property at sea.

Nearly fifty-six hundred persons were rescued from peril, while almost thirty-five thousand were assisted in distress.

The traditions of the Coast Guard will not countenance service as policemen to enforce unwanted and restrictive laws.

America Learns to Write

Europe Forgets

Alfred A. Knopf, Purchase, N. Y., publisher, has always been hospitable to foreign authors. His company has introduced many of them to Americans.

Now, returning from Europe, Mr. Knopf says there never was a time in his experience when there was so little "excitement" in European literary circles. Sterility is apparent, he declares, in Italy, France and England.

America is the country now producing literature. No other compares with it.

Mr. Knopf, friend of foreign authors, deserves to be heard when he asserts that no country in Europe can offer "such a line-up of authors as the United States has today."

Our Old-Fashioned Ships

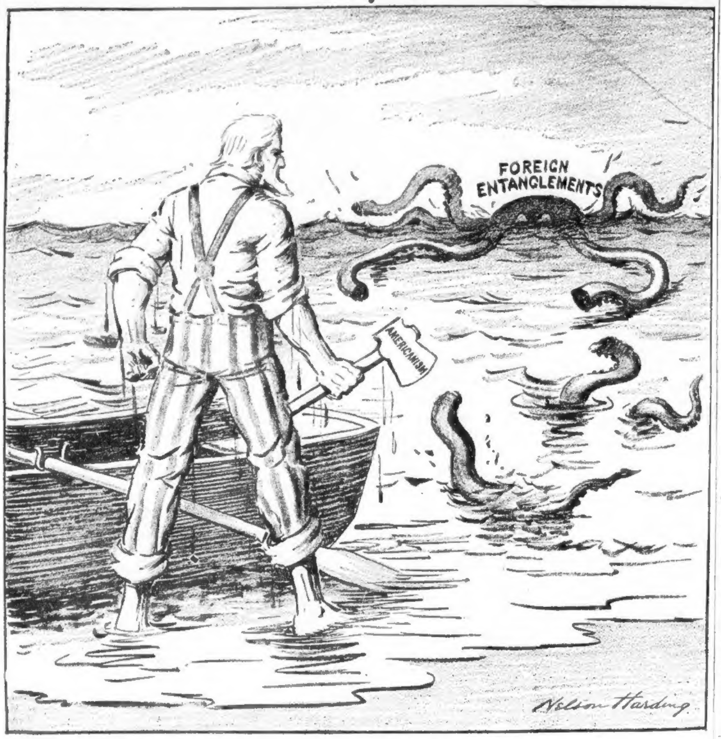
Replace Them With New Ones

The American Merchant Marine is second in size to Great Britain's but fifth in speed and eighth in age. In five or six years eight or nine out of every ten ships will be out-of-date, obsolete.

The National Council of American Shipbuilders does well to point out these facts. It's about time we started building new ships. Our commerce requires them. Our role in the world demands them. They will aid us in time of war. They will give employment in time of peace. Let's hear the rivet-drivers!

Now Stay Free!

By Nelso Harding



Now that Uncle Sam has severed
Those persistent and resourceful
Tentacles that almost seized him
In their dangerous embraces,

Let him shun the foreign waters
Where the octopus is lurking.
Now, if he has learned his lesson,
He will guard and keep his freedom.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

An Indignant Father Wants to Know

Mr. Henry Van Maren, styling himself as "An Indignant Father"—and acting the part 100 per cent—has the space today.

Elsie Robinson

Mr. Van Maren figures he has paid about $8500 for this privilege. Not to this column, but to Daughter Katie—this sum having been expended to give Daughter Katie all the breaks to her present sophomore year in college.

With what result? That's what Father Van Maren wants to know.

WRONG ATTITUDE

"She is today everything I wouldn't want a daughter of mine to be," says he, after a red hot preamble. "And I blame it entirely on our attitude toward modern youth—particularly college youth.

"In our attempt to make life fuller and easier for our children than it was for us, we have given them unprecedented liberty and license and, worst of all, publicity.

"The result is that we are raising the most disrespectful, ungrateful, conceited, lawless and generally worthless young bunch of hoodlums the human race has ever seen.

"They think they know everything and have a right to do anything. They regard us as a bunch of old dodos, at whom they literally thumb their noses.

"Their slogan has become—'We owe nothing to anyone. We have the right to upset all the old established ideas of law and order BECAUSE we're a lot smarter. We've been to college—we've learned about better forms of government even though the old man didn't and hasn't.'

LACK EXPERIENCE

"And so they proceed to use the institutions that WE have worked to pay for as a tool to take us apart. They are ready to upset all the old ideas and ideals without batting an eyelash.

"And this in the face of the fact that they lack the one thing most essential to deal with such serious problems—EXPERIENCE. Can you tell them that, though? I should say not! They are smarter; they 'know what it's all about'!

"That is the attitude now spreading throughout our universities. And we are paying the bills to spread this sort of thing!

"It's bad enough when this attitude is confined to the family or college campus, but it is now attacking our very government. The recent 'march' of college students protesting against a measure which would require all students of tax-supported colleges to take an oath of allegiance to the United States is a case in point.

"Here were young people who are being educated by the taxpayers of America, or by fathers who owe their wealth to the protection of America.

"Common decency would seem to dictate that these young people should be grateful and willing to pledge loyalty in return for the great advantages they have received.

"Yet they publicly protest against taking the oath of allegiance, and some papers and public leaders even endorsed their act!

GIRL A COMMUNIST

"When I told my daughter what I thought of such an outrage, she asked me if I were some ignorant medieval monster and then tried to tell me how 'advanced young thinkers' despised America for her capitalistic system! I tried to hold my temper and jokingly asked her if she'd prefer Communism.

"To my horror she boldly admitted that she is a Communist, and says that a chapter of that organization exists on her campus with the full knowledge and consent of the faculty!

"This may be legal, but I ask you: Is it common sense? And if America permits this kind of thing, what can she expect but her own downfall in the near future?

"HENRY VAN MAREN,
"An Indignant Father."

I pass, dad. It's too large a question for me.

So I'm putting it up to the Proletariat. How 'bout it, comrades?

Just what do you think of modern youth, Inc.—and our American system of allowing 'em free air?

Words of Wise

Persons are often hated when they don't belong to our class. They are loved when we know them and mix in their joys and sorrows.—Dr. A. H. McKinney.

People seldom improve when they have no model but themselves to copy.—Oliver Goldsmith.

It is much easier to avoid disagreements than to remove discontents.—George Washington.

We come but slowly to the recognition of our opportunities. —Charles B. Newcomb.

No one is troubled because he finds a pearl in a diseased oyster.—Canon Liddon.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 29—Thoughts while strolling: Jane Cowl was the glamour girl of her day. Grover Whalen blondined would make a Paul McCullough. And with a plaid vest, shoe string tie and Stetson, George Rector could be Nat Goodwin in "Cameo Kirby." Add hiccup names—Jay Thorpe.

O. O. McIntyre

Scarcely hire a taxi during a Father Coughlin broadcast. Drivers prefer to listen. What became of Eleanor Painter? Crosby Gaige is least conspicuous of theatrical producers. No one plays a gigolo's role with the realism of Pepy de Albrew. And what a fiction name for a real life vice queen—Polly Adler.

Spring is here! Al Woods tilts a chair in front of a theater. Jack Dempsey's ball-of-the-foot glide. Will Cuppy, the hermit book critic, who has read every mystery story published in the past 15 years. Favorite column character—Frank Sullivan's Aunt Sarah Gallup.

Nobody could be as goofy as Victor Moore looks on the stage. Anything-for-a-laugh comedians. The Ritz Brothers. Swell columnar name—Ted Robinson. Eddie Dowling's shepherd plaid trousers and russet vests. But not since Oscar Hammerstein and Si Goodfriend has Broadway seen a high silk hat in daylight.

Or has anyone beaten those tomboy getups of Katharine Hepburn? Ryley Cooper's new book missed the Literary Guild selection by one vote. Wish Bruno Lessing would light. He makes stay-at-homes restless. Young T. R. is slew-footed. What the world needs is a good old-fashioned attack of the giggles!

Gene Fowler has become the minute man of Hollywood, turning out a novel or a film play with greater speed than any writer on the coast. He is also the maverick of the herd, unpredictable and hard to lasso. But once he signs on the dotted line he will carry through. He enjoys working with executives who make decisions quickly because his mind works trigger-like.

He receives a straight sum of $25,000 for each movie, regardless of what it is or how much or little time to produce the finished script. Usually, however, he knocks them out in six weeks. Recently he joined the increased caravan of water wagoners and will go for nothing more potent than orange phosphate, the dude.

Golf tops all sport for a sustained professional athletic career. With Ruth as the notable exception, the average star ball player is washed up in five years. The crack golfer may last 20 years and the big cleanup is after his amateur finish.

Bobby Jones is reported to have salted a quarter million after bowing out. Walter Hagen started as a ball player but turned to golf when he saw the possibilities.

Louis Bromfield proves again an old established axiom of the theater. That the better novelists often make poor playwrights. All of his tries for the stage—two this season—have brought out the most polished people to see rather puerile poof.

Even the extravagantly three-sheeted Elsa Maxwell, with her glossily assembled claque, could not turn the thumbs-down tide. But Bromfield will go back to his isolated Senlis to write more books for new capital to try again. Playwriting is incurable.

Alice Hughes, first to columnize the shopping excitements of department stores and specialty shops, has become the most widely traveled of New York's women reporters.

Over night she may decide on a Nellie Bly dash up the gangplank that will land her in Moscow, Bangkok or Burma.

An unsmiling lady of hurricane energies, she sets off for far corners of the world with only a small dab of luggage, but before she returns she has likely circled the globe. Most people have lost the taste for gallivanting before acquiring the art of traveling light.

I romp to any film, as I used to stage plays, in which Charles Butterworth appears. He has originated and developed a character vignette no one has been able to duplicate.

The set to his lips, the vacuous gaze that suggests the only thing passing through his head is a breeze, and the fawn-like startle when he realizes he has blundered again.

I think no line—and I can't tell why—so hilarious as that of his when an arch lady in coquettish mood passes him on a park bench, wearing milk-white flannels, white hat, shoes, umbrella and gloves.

"All in white," he murmurs in the manner of a great discovery. And returned to munching peanuts.

New Star of Stage

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

"BERGNER SHOW HAS ANOTHER $20,000 WEEK."
"LUPESCU BECOMES MODERN POMPADOUR."
"BARODY PIGMY IS ONLY A HOAX."

Such are the headlines buried in the welter of revolutions and political controversy.

Elisabeth Bergner, frail and slim, a Viennese of 37, is the toast of New York's theaterdom. She carries along a weak play to capacity houses while critics, perhaps a bit over-ethusiastic, proclaim her another Duse or at least a Bernhardt.

Edwin C. Hill

She says nothing of herself, letting her acting speak for itself while she remains as much of a sphinx as Garbo, whom she resembles somewhat.

Bergner came to stardom in Germany about eight years ago, making particular success in Shaw's "Saint Joan."

Nazie domination drove her to England, and her picture, "Catherine the Great," made with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was barred from the German screen.

TO THE FRONT

London accepted her wholeheartedly, and her debut in "Escape Me Not" was a sensation. After a year's run, the Londoners were paying $25 a ticket for the final performance before she came to America to do the same play under the slightly changed title of "Escape Me Never."

We will hear a lot in the future about this woman, who is remarkable for her gestures and the shrillness of her voice.

* * *

Out of Bucharest comes the report that Magda Lupescu, more than ever, is the power behind the throne.

A few months ago we were told that she was on the way into exile and that Queen Helen was to return.

Something has happened since then, for it is the hand of the junkman's daughter which more than ever before directs the rule of the infatuated Carol.

DANGEROUS GAME

Feeling runs high against Lupescu in strong and influential quarters in Rumania. The voluptuous, red-haired, uncrowned queen plays a dangerous game.

* * *

It seems a pity that it isn't true, as reported, that the fossil remains of the human man, fifteen inches tall, have been found in India.

As improbable as the report sounded, science waited anxiously for a verification only to get the information some jokester was drawing the long bow.

Whoever he was, he knew his classics, for as far back as Homer we have reports of a tribe so small that it was wiped out in a war with the cranes.

Aristotle believed such a tiny race existed, while Ctesias, another writer of the ancients, set it down that in the heart of India there lived a people less than two feet in height.

The smallest we know are the tribes in the interior of New Guinea.

These little people average but four feet. The belief is that they were driven from Africa fifteen thousand years ago.

An explorer discribes them as having "voices like megaphones" and they can "blow tiny darts with unerring precision."

Next to these natives of New Guinea are the 55-inch bearded hunters of the Congo, who run from the white man and who are as much at home in the treetops as they are on the ground.

The elves and dwarfs of German fairy tales are regarded as figment of the imagination of bedtime story tellers. Yet it seems strange that the ancients insisted that such people really existed.

Someday, perhaps, we may get real proof of them, such as the proofs we are getting today that Samson did pull down the temple of the Philistines and that the passage of the Red Sea was a natural phenomenon which has been possible on other occasions since and before Moses and the Israelites.

How the Taxpayer's Money Goes

Extract from Congressional Record, March 12, 1935.

Senator Long of Louisiana (in the Senate):

"Mr. President. I desire the Congress of the United States to spend the money of the people in such a way as will do the most good.

"So I want to say for my part—and I mean every word I am saying—we would have been better off (in Louisiana) if we had never had a dollar of federal money. The government has gone in there and spent this money and told our people, 'If you have got a garden, we are not going to put you on the relief roll', and they therefore, do not raise any gardens. It has said to the man who has a potato patch that it is not going to let him have any relief money, and so he does not have a potato patch.

PREPARING

"In my section a man can go into the country and raise a garden in six weeks' time. He can plant turnips and soon they will be up above the ground, and one can have turnips and corn meal and catch fish somewhere and live easier than anywhere on God's living earth.

"When I saw the hard times coming on, we put out a little paper from the Agricultural Department of Louisiana, and we taught everybody in that state how to plant a garden.

"We taught them how to swap; we taught them how to swap a sack of beans from the hills of North Louisiana for a sack of rice from the lowlands of South Louisiana, whether either party had a dollar or not.

PUBLISHED LIST

"We published an exchange list, which I should like some of the members of the Senate to see; so that if a man in South Louisiana had a coop of chickens he could not sell he could trade it to a man in North Louisiana maybe for a sack of beans or a sack of potatoes.

"Lo and behold, this relief outfit came along, and if a man advertised that he had anything that he wanted to put on the list to swap to somebody they cut him off the relief roll, and, therefore, so none of them have anything they want to swap.

"That is how the relief agencies act; that is what is happening to relief.

"I would make a man have a garden before I would give him any relief, instead of telling him he had to plow up his garden in order to get relief.

SO, THAT'S HOW

"I would say, 'God helps those who help themselves. You can raise some things in this ground, and if you are so low down and so trifling and no account that you are not willing to plant a few turnips and a few beans and a few potatoes and make what you can make, and have a shoat around the house, I will take you off the relief roll.'

"Instead of that, they come along and say, 'If you have a garden, we will not give you any relief at all, and if you accidentally go out and, by chance, catch a day's work, we will take you off the relief roll altogether.' Along comes somebody with a little temporary work; here is a man who decides he wants to build a barn. He would go out and hire a few people for five days, or perhaps for two weeks, in order to build a barn, but, lo and behold, he cannot get anybody to work for him, for the reason that anybody who works on a barn is going to be taken off the relief rolls.

"That is how the money is being spent."
